NEGRO SUSPECTED OF DOUGLAS CRIME ARRESTED IN COOS

The sheriff's office was notified today that Frank Jones, a giant negro vagrant arrested Monday night at Sumner mountain in Coos county, has been identified as one of the men who on the night of September 7 brutally assaulted L. O. Crewson, who resides on the Umpqua highway below Scottsburg. The sheriff's office is conducting a further investigation today, and if the identification is sufficient the negro will be brought to Roseburg.

Crewson, an ex-service man, suffering ill health as a result of war service, was called from his home late at night on the 7th of September, and was confronted by a negro and a white man. Both attacked him without warning, according to the story given the officers. He knocked the negro down, but was hit over the head with a club wielded by the white man, was badly beaten after being knocked unconscious and then thrown over the side of the road onto the rocks. One lung was punctured by a broken rib and he was in a critical condition for several days.

Although a search was made all over the state for his assailants, they were never located.

Monday the sheriff's force at Coquille arrested a negro who had been begging from house to house and had terrorized residents of Sumner mountain district. Crewson, taken to Coquille Saturday by Deputy Sheriff Dodson of Reedsport, positively identified Jones as one of his assailants. The description of the negro is said to fit perfectly with that given by Crewson following the assault. Crewson collapsed after making the identification and had to be taken to the hospital over night to recover from shock.

The sheriff's office is communicating today with Deputy Sheriff Dodson and with officers at Coquille relative to the case.

Visit From Corvallis — Mrs. H. B. Church and son, Floyd, and daughter, Troas, spent the week-end in Roseburg visiting with Mr. Church. They are now located in Corvallis where Floyd and Troas are attending the state college.

GLIDE HUNTERS KILL 3 COUGARS

(News-Review, Douglas County Special)

GLIDE, Oct. 27.—Floyd Watson and Seth Matthews of Glide, and J. Kenneth Henninger of Oakland killed three large cougars last week on a hunting trip up the North Umpqua. Mr. Watson saw one of the animals following him through the woods and stopped to take a shot. The cougar ran into the brush and jumped on a log, where Mr. Watson took a long shot at him but missed. At the same time he saw another cougar some distance away. He started to reload his gun and found that shell he had been carrying in his pocket had dropped out through a hole and that he had only two cartridges left, so decided to call the other members of the party.

They returned to Fall creek and secured a pack of hounds that took up the trail, and within a few minutes they found where a deer had been killed, partly eaten and the carcass buried. They went back to this spot the next day and secured fresh tracks that resulted in three cougars being killed.

Mr. Watson and Mr. Matthews recently killed a large coyote which had been killing turkeys. The dogs picked up the trail about 100 yards from the house and followed it to the head of Fall creek before the animal was killed. Considerable damage to stock has been done in the Fall creek district in the past, and it is believed that killing of coyotes and cougars will result in saving many sheep and turkeys.

VISITING FLIERS WATCHED BY LARGE ATTENDANCE HERE

Hans Mirow, owner of the Mirow Flying service of Portland, accompanied by Bill Larson, parachute jumper and stunt pilot, were in Roseburg Sunday flying two planes carrying passengers. They had planned to be in Roseburg Saturday, but were delayed by poor weather, and did not reach the city until Sunday noon. They had planned to bring a girl wingwalker and parachute jumper with them, but the young lady became ill shortly before leaving Portland and was taken to the hospital for an emergency operation.

A large crowd was on the field Sunday afternoon to watch the flying activities. The field was a busy place with planes carrying local passengers, while several ships stopped for short rests at the field.

Edison E. Mouton, of Oakland, California, chief inspector for the U. S. department of commerce, flew in during the afternoon and stopped at the airport for a few minutes to check over the condition of the field.

Mr. Mirow states that this will be his last visit to Roseburg this year, but he expects to return in the spring to give passenger rides.

HUNT FOR JAMES' BODY TO CONTINUE

W. L. Dorman, brother-in-law of Emery James, Salem politician who became lost on the Little river divide October 6 and H. E. Lyons, son-in-law, returned to Roseburg Saturday evening after assisting in the search for James' body. They went to Salem Sunday, but plan to return soon, if possible, to continue the hunt with the crew that is now being organized to work as long as weather conditions will permit.

Mr. Dorman stated that the relatives and friends of Mr. James are very grateful for the assistance given by Roseburg people, and particularly the sheriff's office for the help afforded.

Analyze the "Grange Bill" Before You Vote

191 leading citizens and taxpayers of Oregon, on page 55 of the Voters' Pamphlet, conclude their argument against the the measure as follows:

"We recommend a 'No' vote on this amendment

"BECAUSE this amendment would open the flood gates of public expenditures at the taxpayers' expense;

"BECAUSE it would create a new class of political agencies, and give them unlimited power to incur debt, levy taxes and spend public money;

"BECAUSE it would invite the worst kind of political gerrymandering for promotional schemes;

"BECAUSE it would discourage new industry from locating in Oregon;

"BECAUSE it would retard efforts to secure federal development of the Columbia, and

"BECAUSE Oregon needs all of its present taxpaying industries to share the necessary cost of government. Oregon cannot afford a new class of uncontrolled tax-spending political bodies, operating tax exempt property in a hazardous business enterprise, at the risk of the already burdened taxpayers of the state."
