DRIVE through these smaller cities and observe closely the names you will see displayed on the various pieces of business. You will note that they have a strongly Italian flavor.

Now San Francisco has chosen a mayor with a distinctively Italian name. It is just possible that the old days are passing, and that a new situation is arising that will make feasible consolidation of cities here on the bay, so that when the census of 1940 is taken the figures for San Francisco won't show up so disadvantageously with the figures for Los Angeles.

SPEAKING of population, northern California has discovered another dastardly conspiracy on the part of southern California. You will recall that this state made a huge growth in the past decade. This growth entitled it to a lot of new congressmen. Now, it appears, California south of the Tehachapi is planning to grab, through the old process of gerrymandering, the bulk of these new seats.

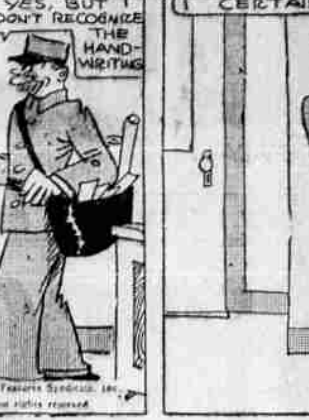

Northern California is all steamed up about it, and is planning vociferously to DO SOMETHING. THE rivalry between the southern and the northern parts of California has done this great state no harm.

A little more friendly rivalry between northern and southern Oregon would do Oregon no harm. IN the early decades, northern California was just about EVERYTHING, just as northern Oregon is now everything. Then southern California arose and became great and since that time has been demanding its full share of the cream, and perhaps a little bit more, to make up for the past.

Advice to Girls

DEAR NANCY LEE: I am a young man in my late teens and very much in love with a girl one year my junior. I have known her for four years now and often have told her of the love I have for her. She calls it "Puppy Love" and says "I'm silly when ever I approach the subject. Yet she won't have other boys talk mean of me or say anything out of place. Do you think she cares a le bit? How can I prove my love for her? How would you go about it to ask for her steady company?"

Talks on Health

A GREAT deal has been said about industrial hazards of an acute, there are many such, but it is undoubtedly true that "the eye hazards of industry have come to be one of the most serious causes of blindness in America."

What is going to be done about it? The language I have just quoted is taken from the recent and very interesting report of a study conducted by the National Society Council and the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. This survey covers the records kept by various industrial corporations during the years 1926 and 1927, in which period 2,757 men and women were reported saved from serious injury or total blindness in both eyes during those two years. What I mean is that improved conditions have done away with accidents which would have occurred under old-time conditions. Also, 4,654 cases were recorded of workmen saved from injury or total blindness in one eye. This makes a total of 10,168 eyes saved from serious injury or total destruction.

Dangerous Industries: Represented in the list of 582 industrial plants, employing an aggregate of 378,396 men, to which questionnaires were sent, were metal, chemical, automotive, steam, railroad, cement, mining and other companies. These are the industries in which most of the eye injuries are met.

The use of protective glasses or goggles with lenses and face masks, so strongly built as to resist flying metal or deadly chemicals, has come to be the accredited thing in most industrial plants. In consequence, the numbers of cases of blindness and eye injury have become fewer each year.

This is encouraging, but it is not enough. The great need is for safety measures to be taken by every industrial plant for elimination of eye hazards. What is needed is guarded machinery and tools at the seat of operations. Every industrial company should be held to account for revising their processes of manufacturing so that man beings shall be safeguarded from the untold misery and great cost of blindness to the individual to the state, and to the nation. Chemicals Responsible: There has been a great increase in the use of destructive chemicals

Ships Raided in War on Gambling

(Associated Press Leased Wire) LOS ANGELES, Dec. 27.—District Attorney Byron Pitts declared today that two gambling ships anchored off shore were "casualties for gangsters" which carry machine gun arsenals capable of "blowing right out of the water" any ship lead of officers which might come alongside.

Seven alleged gamblers were arrested on charges of violating the state gambling laws today after spectacular raids on the two boats anchored off Long Beach. Gambling paraphernalia is said by police to have been seized on both craft. The boarding of the larger mark, the first attempt by authorities to interfere with alleged gambling aboard the craft, which for several years have maintained positions outside a set limit believed to render them immune to raids.

District Attorney Pitts stated, after the raids, he was not positive of his jurisdiction but declared he would make a test case of the matter to determine in court whether county authorities have jurisdiction.

Girl Unafraid

CHAPTER XXXVII Nodden or word from Ken. She knew he was keeping away far her sake. That night of pain when he had sunk out of sight, like a heavy stone cast in a deep lake. Not even a ripple left to tell that it had ever been.

So she thought, ignorant of the wide circle the stone had caused. Nor did she understand, until one day shortly before Christmas when a copy of the Spy was delivered to her desk with the rest of the mail. Ardeith frowned at the vivid green cover. Not since Jeanette had left, had the scandalous weekly come into the shop.

She was at a loss now, to account for its presence and she was about to drop it, unread, in the waste basket, when a sudden thought sent the color pulsing in her cheeks. She was suddenly turning the pages frantically, searching... "The night has a thousand eyes—the day but one"—So runs the old verse, which is perhaps the reason the night sees so many more interesting things than does the day.

"Ardeith of which, Ye Spy saw such a touching sight a few nights ago. A young married man of this town calling on his former inamorata. Tender love scenes are so touching!" "I shall not disclose his name, of course, for Ye Spy is never indiscreet, nor do we wish to cause trouble among those who sit in the high places, and this young man, so long ago married into one of our wealthiest families, nor can one entirely blame him, for it is whispered that he was much enamored of this lovely blonde who is fair, though she does not belong to the social elite."

WESTERN GRIDDERS WIN CHARITY GAME BY SCORE OF 3 TO 0

BY RUSSELL J. NEWLAND Associated Press Sports Writer SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 29.—Football's final game of the 1930 season had been written into the records today, a crop of more than fifty thousand dollars had been harvested for charity and the sixth annual east-west game had come down into gridiron history as hard-fought since this classic was established in 1925.

One accurate place kick, originating from the toe of Bus Mills, University of Oklahoma halfback, brought the west an unexpected 3-0 victory over the east after the two all-star squads had battled scoreless up and down Kezar stadium field for nearly four periods. Four minutes were left to play and the westerners had charged up to within eleven yards of goal when Mills sent the oval on its ride between the uprights.

The contest, sponsored by the Shriners' crippled children hospital, netted profits of between $50,000 and $60,000. In six games to date, western teams have four times emerged victorious. Eastern elevens captured the long end of the score in 1928 and 1929.

"Kitz" Wins Credit The eastern squad, coached by Andy Kerr of Colgate and Dick Hanley of Northwestern, went into the game a decided favorite, holding an eight pound weight advantage per man and a lineup that included some of the best known players of the east and mid-west. While Mills received full credit for the victory, all agreed the spark plug of the west's offense was Johnny Kitzmiller, University of Oregon halfback, who came in to the game in the second period. Kitzmiller's appearance revived the spirits of a battered western squad and he proceeded to reel off long gains that soon had the east on the defensive. The blonde star from the Pacific northwest was the leading ground gainer of the day and directed his team's strategy while in the game.
