BAILEY BACK FROM GRANGE MEETING

Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Bailey, of South Deer Creek, returned yesterday evening from Portland, where Dr. Bailey, a member of the executive committee of the state grange, has been assisting in the preparation of the grange power bill enabling act, which is to be presented to the Oregon legislature. The power amendment, passed at the last general election, requires the passage of an enabling act by the legislature, and the grange is suggesting a bill that will put the plan into operation. Dr. Bailey states that he believes the bill will provide very effective operation of the new amendment. He was also a member of a party of Oregon grange members who went to Olympia to meet with Governor Hartley of Washington. Albert Goss, master of the Washington state grange, and others of that state to discuss the matter of federal development of the Unatilla lands power project. Julius Harlan, C. C. Hulet, master of the Oregon state grange; Ray W. Gill, of the executive committee, and Fred J. Toole, a member of the state grange legislative committee, were among those present at the conference. Mr. Goss is leaving in the near future for Washington, D. C., in the interest of the power project. Mr. Hulet has arranged with Senator C. L. McNary to represent the Oregon grange at the hearing.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS THE ADVENTURE OF THE NEW YEAR I'll meet each day with smiling face, I'll meet each day with smiling face, I'll live its hours with courteous grace, For all that's beautiful I'll stand; Approach each day with reverence sweet For opportunities to serve, Leap to its chance with springing feet, With rapture in each virile nerve. I'll meet each day with mind that's clean; I'll hold before me high ideal, Rejoice from every thing that's mean, And strive to make my dreaming real. With laughing lips I'll meet my friends And even so I'll greet my foes, With loving heart I'll make amends Wherever sordid trouble flows. I'll give to very man that's down A helping hand to rouse his pluck, I'll give him smiles but not a frown, Encourage him to better luck. Congratulate each earnest soul That's winning upward in his fight; Appreciate his happy goal And cheer him on to grander flight. I'll come to night with weary limbs, But know my work has been well done, My heart will sing the happy hymns Of those whose lives are in the sun. Then God will give me gracious sleep To rest me from my joyous toil, And angels camping round will keep A guard that every foe will foil.

PREVENTABLE ILLS TAKE HEAVY TOLL, LOCAL MEDIC SAYS

Editor's Note—Following is the text of an address presented before the Roseburg Kiwanis club at its regular luncheon meeting held Tuesday, December 30, by Dr. E. J. Wainwright. The prevention of disease is the most important problem of our civilization today. This statement cannot be successfully disputed from any angle from which you approach it; either from a financial or economic standpoint, or from a viewpoint of life, health and happiness, which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. The economic cost of disease involves figures beyond our comprehension. This cost alone is over 40 million dollars annually. To make this more understandable and conceivable, I will give you a few figures: There are over 300,000 individuals annually employed in the state of Oregon. Sickness is a hazard to which all are subjected, and to which many fall victims. Those who are disabled by sickness suffer losses of time; cost of care, etc. In Oregon there is a daily average of 9000 wage earners confined to their homes on account of sickness. The workers lose on average, 7 days annually on account of sickness; 400,000 workers losing 7 days each at a daily minimum wage of 4 dollars suffer an annual loss of 12 million dollars on account of illness. There is an annual death rate of 9000-40 per cent, or 3600 of which are preventable or postponable, at an estimated average value of $2,500—means a loss of $22,000,000. Thus the total annual loss from preventable diseases is: Wages lost $12,000,000 Service of physician 3,000,000 Hospital nursing 3,000,000 Drugs, all kinds 4,000,000 Loss by death 22,000,000 Total $44,000,000 Thus decreased efficiency, due to disease, imposes a toll upon industry of over $40,000,000 annually. The sad part of this fact is that a larger part of this loss is preventable. In order to prevent the tremendous waste of the resources of this great country, it has been found necessary to adopt the doctrine of conservation. The doctrine of conservation has been applied to mines, forests, water power, hogs, cattle, buffalo, and wild animals. It is now high time that we apply a little doctrine of conservation to the most important of all our resources—that of our health. We spare no effort to assure ourselves that our business is being conducted on principles of efficiency and good judgment. We know that to show a profit, we must follow the principles of good business. Do we give the same attention to our bodily health? We cannot expect to enjoy continued happiness and good health unless we give it as much attention as we do our business. To enjoy health to its fullest extent we must treat it as a business concern and study it as such. Just recently the president and congress of the United States have endorsed a child welfare and public health conservation movement. At a recent White House conference on child health and protection, the president said, "The problem falls into three groups: First—The protection and stimulation of the normal child. Second—Aid to the physically defective and handicapped child. Third—The problem of the delinquent child." In the state of Oregon we have 46,000 improperly nourished children, 8,000 with weak or damaged hearts, 3,000 are mentally retarded, 2,000 impaired hearing, 2,000 tuberculous, and 5,000 with behavior problems. Isn't there plenty of work for the underprivileged child committees? About 80 per cent of these deficient are not receiving the necessary attention though our knowledge and experience show that these deficiencies can be prevented and remedied to a high degree. These deficiencies can only be reached by agencies or measures provided by the nation, the state, the county or the community. Locally they can be reached only by a well functioning county health bureau. They are beyond the reach of the individual parent because the ill-nourished and deficient child is not caused by poverty, but is largely due to ill-instructed children and ignorance of parents in matter relative to health. It has been found that 40 per cent of all school children in this state have some remedial physical defects which if remedied in time, will lead to robust health, but if neglected will seriously handicap them in making a success of life. Authorities state that 20 per cent of the school children of the United States repeat one or more of the first eight grades in school on account of some physical defect. Since it costs about $75 per year to educate a child in the public schools, this failure to make their grades counts an enormous amount of money. It is therefore the best sort of economy to prepare the child physically for the education which the state provides. We often hear the statement, "Nothing is too good for our children," and we spend millions of dollars for their education. The cost per child in our public schools is almost a hundred dollars per year. Why we spend a hundred dollars for education and then neglect to spend a few additional dollars to protect their health is a question that every parent should give serious consideration. In Oregon, however, we should feel grateful, for due to a fair cooperation between the medical profession, parents, school boards, and the health department, we have as healthy a state as any in the Union. We have the lowest infant death rate of any state in the entire United States. To maintain this record, to conserve the health of the people, to correct the losses due to disease, is the stupendous task of preventive medicine, boards of health and general health welfare movements—the object of which is to keep the well in a state of being well, to prevent disease rather than to cure it, for the first is easy and cheap, while the latter is expensive and often impossible.

WATER-POWER BILL DRAWN FOR GRANGE

(Associated Press Leased Wire) PORTLAND, Dec. 31.—Proposed legislation to carry out the purposes of the grange water and power utility districts constitutional amendment, voted at the November election, held the attention of the executive committee of the Oregon state grange in session here today. The group had before it the bill drafted and prepared by a special committee appointed by C. C. Hulet, state master, which form is expected to be presented to the state legislature. The bill provides, Kenneth Harlan, consulting attorney, said, that upon petition by 10 per cent of the voters of a proposed power district to a state hydro-electric commission, which is to be set up by other legislation, to be submitted by the state legislature. The commission will make a study of the feasibility of the project and within 60 days call a public hearing before the entire district. The hearing will make it the responsibility for or against the proposed project following the hearing. It must then call an election. In the district, decide formation, general obligation bonds, and elect five directors. All three issues are to be on the same ballot. Harlan said the proposal provides that no property be removed from the tax roll, but rather that the tax, vote and control be taken exactly as private utility projects. Members of the executive committee considering the proposed draft were Grange Master Hulet, chairman; Walter M. Pierce, former governor of Oregon; C. H. Harber, Roseburg; and Ray G. Hill, Portland.
