TOO MUCH WHEAT, LEGGE DECLARES

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
URBANA, Ill., Jan. 16.—Alexander Legge, chairman of the federal farm board, in an address prepared for delivery on the annual farm and home week program of the University of Illinois today said that United States wheat growers "have no alternative but to produce no more than can be consumed at home if they want a better price."

"The world wheat market is decidedly gloomy for the American grower," Mr. Legge said. "There already is too much wheat, with production increasing in some of the exporting countries and Russia coming back into the market faster than any of us thought possible. There is no way to get rid of surplus American wheat at a price below the present domestic level."

Legge said it was too early to say whether the "benefits of the grain stabilization corporation's efforts to keep price of wheat to the American farmer from 20 to 25 cents higher than the world market price will be permanent."

"Such stabilization operations cannot cope with continuous surpluses," he said. "The only solution is to adjust production downward to domestic consumption."

Legge said he had information of a "widespread drive" by grain brokers using financial pressure in an attempt to break down the stabilizing operations by calling for doubled margin on May wheat but offering to carry growers at the old figure if contracts were transferred to the new crop of July wheat, unsupported by the board.
