THE HABIT ROAD

By W. TAYLOR COOPER. Jim Jimson built a Habit Road, he built it good and strong. Began when just a little lad, kept at it right along.

Till, time he'd reached his manhood years, he had it most complete. And, to Jimson's way of thinking, 'twas pretty hard to beat.

It would have been much better, had there been some changes made. He might have straightened out the curves and cut down on the grade.

But being used to following the old route day by day, He couldn't think of traveling by any other way.

Said he, when one suggested that his road was not built right: "The road-bed seems solid and the rails are spiked down tight. And if my way of traveling to others wrong may seem, I guess they needn't worry, they don't have to furnish steam."

Before condemning Jimson's road, let's look upon our own. To see in its construction if there's much improvement shown. Though we may pride ourselves and say it's stubbornness in him.

The most of us, to tell the truth, are just about like Jim.

But after all is said and done, our record left will show. Some very poor construction on the road over which we go. And will we see in backward look, at setting of Life's sun, The glaring faults and errors of the course that we have run?

Visiting in Roseburg — Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lundberg, of Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, are spending several days in this city as the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Young. They expect to leave some time next week for Seattle where they will visit. They are looking over the Pacific coast and may locate in the west. Mr. and Mrs. Lundberg expect to remain on the coast until next spring.

Vincent Preschern, of Melrose, was a business visitor in this city yesterday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Bowers, of Elkton, were in town yesterday afternoon visiting friends and attending to business affairs. Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hodges, of Lookingglass, were in town yesterday afternoon visiting friends and attending to business affairs.

Oh, would that we might see them now, correct them if we can, Try to make our road conform to the Master Builder's plan. Then, even though our building will be poor enough at best, He'll understand and will accept, when comes the final test.
