(By Revival Editor)

The audience at the armory gave the closest attention last evening as Dr. Lowry brought home to the hearts of all present, the tremendous importance of immediate action in putting one's house in order, and being ready for the judgment of God.

Another large audience was present for the service yesterday afternoon when Dr. Lowry spoke on "Creation Versus Evolution." Tomorrow afternoon he will speak on "The Bodily Resurrection."

This evening the subject will be, "The Judgment Day," when he says he will prove from God's word that will prove from God's word that ing those who know not God, and obey not the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In speaking on the "Pleasures of Sin," last evening, Dr. Lowry took for his text Hebrews 11:24-26, "By Faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater, riches than the treasures of Egypt."

My theme, more broadly stated, might be expressed as "The devil's bid for a Man's Moses was a man of like passions as we are. If he had listened to the cries of his old Adam nature, he would have indulged every desire of the flesh. No doubt he was looked upon as a fool by those who knew him in Egypt because of the choice he made.

But Moses would not sacrifice his principles of righteousness for any position of worldly honor. In other words, Moses would rather tend sheep in the wilderness for God than to rule Egypt for the devil. Young men, young women, I admire you if you are hoping that you may some day fill some position of responsibility and power in the world, but be careful that you do not seek these things of the world at the sacrifice of your principles of righteousness.

Many young people are going astray these days, not because they intended to do so, but because they had no particular aim in life. We are told that a stray dog will follow anyone. Many young people are going astray these days not because they aimed to do so, but because they had no particular aim or purpose in life. Believe any young man or woman with grit and gumption, supplemented with the grace of God, can do anything worth being and do anything worth doing. A dead fish can drift with the current, but it takes a live one to go against it. Any old thing can drift to hell, but it takes a man or woman with backbone to be a Christian.

Then Moses gave up the pleasures of sin in the choice he made. "Choosing rather to suffer affliction . . . than to enjoy the pleasures of sin." There is no denying the fact that the worldling gets some pleasure out of sin. The Bible does not deny that, but it is a pleasure for a season. Men and women everywhere naturally find it easier to live a life of sin than a life of righteousness. All that is necessary for a life of sin is to treat the ones and drift.

I have not the least doubt that if Moses had listened to the cries of his carnal nature, he would have remained right there in the palace of Pharaoh, where he could have had all the pleasures of sin that this world can afford. Why does this world can afford that why does the unsaved find pleasure in sin? It is because they have never learned of anything better.

Why, then, do we see so many drawn away by these things of the world, the flesh and the devil? It is because they have never really been born of God. The Bible plainly declares, "If any man loves the world the love of the Father is not in him." I did not say that that is what God says.

There are two ways of overcoming sin and temptation; by the power of resistance and by the power of counter attraction. The Christian has the latter method. He has Christ and salvation in his heart; therefore, having found something far more satisfying than these things of the world, he has the power over him. Moses had the consciousness of having God's favor. He may have at times during that forty years in the wilderness been tempted to think he had made

Freed—The Stain Is Gone

Lillian Russo was tried three times for killing her uncle in defense of her honor, and acquitted at the third trial in Jersey City, N. J. She is shown receiving flowers from a friend after her release from prison. But her happiness is not complete, because her father was convicted of manslaughter.

Rebels Against Noted Rebel

Senora Concepcion Goeldner Escobar, of El Paso, Texas, is suing for an annulment of her marriage to General Gonzales Escobar, former Mexican rebel chieftain (both above). Senora Escobar is the general's second wife and says that her husband is living in Montreal with his first wife under the name of J. Doras. She asks for a division of Escobar's property and the custody of their 4-year-old son.

too great a sacrifice. Yes, he may have sometimes forgotten God, but God had not forgotten him. He was testing him, and at the end of the forty years God lifted him up and made him the greatest ruler and leader that this world has ever known. Young men, young women, don't be rebellious against your circumstances—It may be that God is testing you for some great service in the world.

Don't chafe under your present circumstances, young Christians. It may be that God is simply testing you to see what kind of stuff you are made of. Be faithful to him and one of these days He will come and lift you up and cause you to leave a name that will never die. How often we see a young man get a new vision of life. He is one of a hundred other lads in the town, but suddenly he is seized by a new impulse, and his whole after life is changed.

Then, Moses sacrificed the treasure of Egypt. Egypt at that time was the richest nation on earth and had remained in the palace he might have been called "Moses the millionaire." But he was not willing to sell his soul to the devil for forgotten gains.

Money is all right in its place, and you will never hear me saying anything against making money, so long as you make it honorably and use it to glorify God, but the man who hasn't anything but money is the poorest wretch this side of hell.

Much of this talk about tainted money is because "Taint Your Money has no character. Money isn't tainted, but too many of the men who handle it are. It wasn't the 30 pieces of silver that betrayed the Lord Jesus, but it was that black-hearted Judas that did it.

Salvation is a matter of choice. Moses was a man like unto ourselves. He was compelled to choose between Christ and the devil, but he chose the world and salvation. It is one thing sure, you cannot have both.

In spite of everything that can be done or said, many will be lost, and as you enter the abode of the damned you can truthfully say, "I am a card table damned," or "I am whiskey damned," but what satisfaction will it be to you as you look back from the shores of eternity to know that you were able to indulge in all these things?

As you are making your choice tonight, I would like to remind you that these pleasures of sin are but a passing show. There is no denying that just that the sinner gets some pleasure out of sin, but soon these things for which you are selling your soul to the devil will no longer satisfy you. Any sin persisted in will result in the unpardonable sin. No doubt the world called Moses a fool for his choice here, but he has been in glory for 4,000 years. How significant must appear those 40 years of suffering as he looks back upon them after being with God for all these thousands of years. Three thousand four hundred years from tonight everyone of us will be either in hell or heaven, and just like Moses your eternal destiny is determined by the choice you make now.

COMMENT ON DRY REPORT AS VARIED AS VIEWS OF BOARD

Collection of Editorial Opinions From American Papers Reflects General Idea That Wickersham Commission's Findings Only Productive of Continued Discord.

(By the Associated Press) New York Sun—All in all, the report is rather sleazy outside of the minority demands for repeal the only constructive thing in it is the plan for revision of the amendment. This President Hoover hastens to restate. . . If the commission finds the Wickersham report disappointing, and we think it will, it may be because the commission has not stood far enough away from its subject to obtain the right perspective. In neither the report nor any of the separate reports is asked or answered the question that Dwight W. Morrow put to the American people last May: "Is it well that large portions of our people should conceive of the federal government an alien and even a hostile power?"

Oregonian, Portland, Ore.:—"This newspaper believes congress may well make the country stand by the Wickersham commission's majority the test of public opinion. . . This plan contemplates a straightforward and honest approach to the issue at hand. On it there is no taint of nullification. The Oregonian believes, as a firm and consistent advocate of prohibition . . . as any. . . But it would be blind if it failed to recognize after the test of more than a decade that liquor is not banished under national prohibition."

Register - Guard, Eugene: "The Wickersham report upholds nearly everything the dries have been fighting for and concedes to the wets the one big point they have been fighting for, the possible need of amendment. Everybody ought to be happy but they won't be. Politically it is smart. It means that Hoover can run again as a dry but with one hand out to the moist brethren."

Salt Lake Telegram: Prohibition enforcement itself may be regarded as an utter failure, after 11 years of trial. The inescapable conclusion to be drawn from the commission findings is that the law cannot be enforced in its present form.

New York Times: The fact of outstanding interest in the entire report is that six of the eleven commissioners are of one mind as to the one form of modification that should be adopted, if any. Spokane Spokesman Review: The big wet association against the prohibition amendment and its ally, the Modification League, Inc., will find no cheer in these declarations.

Los Angeles Times: While, in the main, the document is strongly dry it has the appearance of an effort to compromise conflicting views which cannot, in fact, be embodied, and, as such, will suit nobody.

Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer: The conclusions and recommendations are in accord with the views of those who believe in the wisdom of national prohibition.

New York Daily News: President Hoover is now definitely drier than the crowd of intellectuals he picked to tell him and the country that prohibition is O. K.

Indianapolis Star: The opinions of the members (of the commission) are indicative of what might be expected from any group of intelligent and conscientious people selected at random. They are for law enforcement even if the law is not 100 per cent satisfactory.

Boston Globe: The spectacle of a hung jury, whose 11 members have submitted 12 verdicts. Chaos, confusion and contradictions are everywhere in evidence throughout this 80,000-word fruit of 23 months of difficult labor.

Rochester (N. Y.) Times Union: The commission's group opinion is that the country should stand by the eighteenth amendment and seek to improve national prohibition enforcement under it.

Philadelphia Enquirer: While it advocates enforcement, it gives reasons why enforcement is next to impossible.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Victory on Capitol Hill goes to the dries on points.

Kansas City Star: Settled nothing.

New Orleans Item: The report will doubtless prove a source of political grief to Mr. Hoover.

Atlanta Constitution: The mountain has labored and produced a mouse. The chief significance of the report is that its members are hopelessly divided.

Denver Rocky Mountain News: The flood of Wickersham reports simply adds fuel to the raging prohibition fire.

San Francisco Chronicle: A perfect picture of the state of the public mind.

Baltimore Evening Sun: The Wickersham report apparently has satisfied only one man in the country, namely, President Hoover. And he apparently read only the first paragraph of the conclusions.

Norfolk, Va., Ledger Dispatch: Instead of aiding in the solution of the prohibition problem, the conclusion as a whole has further befuddled the situation.

Portsmouth, Va., Star: The report is nothing more than a compromise, and a poor one politically at that.

Danville, Va., Bee: The eleven members are just about as much confused over the workability of prohibition as is the country in general.

Richmond, Va., News Leader: Never was a more logical report brought to a more illogical conclusion than when the commission, having discredited the eighteenth amendment with deepest damnation, solemnly affirms that it does not urge its repeal.

LOMSKI DECISIONS CHARLEY BELANGER

(Associated Press Local Wire) PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 21.—Leo Lomski, Aberdeen, Wash., light heavyweight took a close round decision over Charley Belanger, a surprise result which was a hard battle with plenty of action. Lomski's aggressiveness throughout counted heavily in his favor. Belanger, with his long reach, played a tattoo on Lomski's head with his long overhead right and prevented Lomski from getting over many of his well known punishing body blows.

Johnny Hansen, Portland's fighting newsboy, welterweight, added another knockout to his string, taking Mike Griffo, Seattle, in the first round with a stunning right to the chin. The referee stopped the fight. It was Hansen's second knockout over Griffo.

Prince McGale, negro middleweight, won a six-round bout over Tommy Pratt, Portland.

Alyc Davies, Victoria, B. C., lightweight, won a clean cut six-round victory over Eddie Eddelton, Eskimo southpaw in the semi-windup. Only Eddelman's toughness kept him upright, Davies landing almost as he pleased.

Joe Ferguson, 79-pound wrestler, won his first professional boxing start from Bill Robinson, negro, in the four-round curtain-raiser.

RAID IN KLAMATH YIELDS BIG WINERY

(Associated Press Local Wire) KLAMATH FALLS, Jan. 21.—Tracing the liquor supply of Klamath Indians to Pollock City, a suburb of Klamath Falls, state and federal prohibition officers led by Louis Mueller, special United States Indian officer, last night swooped down on the largest winery ever found in Klamath county. More than one thousand gallons of wine was poured onto the snow, staining it a blood red. One vat having a capacity of 1250 gallons, was destroyed.

Three men, A. Conio, Jesus Jara and S. Jastralla, were arrested. Officers said the men were probably bound over to the federal grand jury. Many gallons of moonshine whiskey were found and destroyed by the raiders.
