INDIAN—Today last times, "Just Imagine," with El Brendel, Maureen O'Sullivan; Wednesday and Thursday, "On for a Man," Friday and Saturday, "Africa Speaks."

THERE is something new under the sun. We saw it last night—and heard it also and were given the treat of the season.

It was offered to public view yesterday in "Just Imagine," at the Indian theatre.

"Just Imagine" is laid in a 1930 setting, when the world has changed materially in virtually every element except romance. The story of the love of the "Lindbergh of 1930" in the person of John Garfield for Maureen O'Sullivan is beset with the traditional difficulties of romance of all time, but, of course, this being a musical comedy, true love conquers in the end.

El Brendel, the hilariously funny Swedish comedian, has the principal role and moves in and out of the story at frequent intervals, providing a generous portion of comedy, his second great success this season, having scored in Raoul Walsh's epic, "The Big Trail." He is ably assisted by the vivacious Marjorie White and Frank Albertson, the latter essaying his first light comedy role with marked success.
