TODAY'S MARKETS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 31.—Butter again opened at higher prices in the wholesale market today. Successive price gains have occurred all along the Pacific coast during the week as reflections of a period of unusually limited supplies. Quote: Extras 28c; standards 27; prime firsts 26, all up 1c, and firsts 24c, up 2c.

The butter advance was followed by butterfat with announcements by creameries of 1 or 2 cent additions to bid prices to producers. Quote: Butterfat f. o. b. Portland, 24-25c.

Wholesale egg market continued weak from force of liberal supplies. Wholesale dealers sales were slow, being cut into by direct sales to stores by producers. Quotations were unchanged.

Country dressed meat prices were steady with about normal demand in force in all lines. In the poultry division light hens were down 1c at 13 cents a pound. White Pekin ducks held steady at 21c while colored Pekins were quoted at a 15c bid.

Wool Fairly Active

BOSTON, Jan. 31—The Commercial Bulletin says today:

"The market has continued moderately active this week both in worsted and woolen wools, with prices practically steady on the basis of last week's closing rates. The nature of the demand has changed little, favoring the finer wools mostly.

"There seems to be a disposition on the part of buyers to await the opening of the new heavyweight season and purchases in the meantime are for piecing-out orders for prompt delivery or for sample purposes and the volume of business is not large.

"Foreign markets are a bit steadier following the shortening of the London sales to close February 5 by the withholding of 50,000 bales. The exchange premium against Australia is up 3 per cent for the week to 30 per cent on cable transfers.

"Mohair is dull and nominally unchanged."

TILLIE THE TOILER — Good Intentions

Going Home Again; to Jail

Forty-seven girls piled into this sightseeing bus and a police van in New York City to be shipped back to Bedford reformatory to continue sentences for immorality convictions. Eleven were mothers and held their tiny mites close as a crowd of 2,000 gaped and jeered as they left. One girl is still held in a city prison. She will be the pawn in a test for freedom, which may bring liberty to the others.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

HOW TO GET RID OF WORRY

"It isn't easy for a person, without help, to analyze and get at the bottom of his own troubles," says Professor roves, "though it can be done. But the best way is to go to a friend, one of whose sympathy you are assured, and in whose judgment you have confidence, and make a clean breast of things. Face the trouble! Tell it, down to the last detail which you have confided to no man and which nearly chokes you to bring out. Don't stop with this year, or the year before, but keep digging back into your life. It will be hard. It will hurt. But doesn't the trouble hurt more?

"Sometimes I advise people to go to their old family doctor. Again, a minister may be the man, or a teacher. The big thing is to select someone who will sympathize, and in whom you have confidence.

"But, above all, don't give in to trouble. There is a discoverable cause for it, if it's mental. Make up you mind to get at that cause and dig it out by the roots, whatever the cost! If you do, you will be the first to laugh at what a little thing started it, for a little thing it will be, in nine cases out of ten."

Just drag your worry out to light—
E'en though 'tis not a pretty sight;
It's wondrous how it shrinks in size
When looked upon by other eyes;
The thing that seemed so monstrous big,
When hid away to gnaw and dig
The very vitals of your soul
Seems now to be a puny mole.

When we our worries try to hide—
Because we have some foolish pride,
We see them through a double glass
That gives them much too high a class;
But when they come to light of day
They soon begin to fade away,
The thing that once we magnified

We now have courage to deride.
When we our worries bravely meet
We'll find they have rank coward's feet;
They never will stand up and fight,
But will right soon be put to flight.
Most worries are a thing of blues
That scare us by some cunning ruse;
We think they are a mighty host—
Turn on the light—'tis but a ghost.

When worry tries your mind to ride—
Humiliates your manly pride,
'Tis then you surely need a friend
To bring your troubles to an end.
If all alone they seem too great,
Just let your friend cooperate;
Together give your blues the gaff,
And end them with a hearty laugh.

MISHAP KILLS MAN OF RESCUE FAME

C. T. Paulson, Hero of Sea Horror, Electrocuted at Radio Station.

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 31 — Clifford T. Paulson, 24, radio operator credited with saving many lives when the steamer San Juan sank in a collision off the Pacific coast, August 31, 1929, was electrocuted during the night while working at the radio transmitting set of the Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., here.

Paulson sent the S O S from the San Juan after it had collided with the Standard Oil tanker Todd, 18 miles off Pidgeon point.

Seventy lives were lost in the collision but many were saved because Paulson stayed with his instrument until the San Juan went down.

His body was found this morning lying on the floor near the radio set. His hands had been severely burned by 2,000 volts of electricity. Paulson had ben employed for some months as radio operator at the municipal airport here.

Fate Plays Ironic Trick

Paulson was not officially on duty and his associates assumed he was working at the set in an effort to get some amateur radio stations, as was his custom when no one was using the radio.

Invetigators believed he had placed one hand on the dial of the transmitter and the other on the coils, establishing an electrical circuit through his body that killed him.

Thus he died by the instrument that gave him the power to save others.

Paulson's relatives in Goble, Oregon, were notified of his death.

Bravery Recalled

The operator had figured in another sea disaster. He was member of the crew of the tugboat City of Nome when it caught fire.

He had told his associates there was an old saying among sea-going men "that one shouldn't give the elements a chance to strike three times."

When the San Juan began to sink, Paulson made use of the ship's auxiliary battery to call for aid. As his last S O S went out, the water entered the radio room He made a dash for safety and was taken out of the sea.

Paulson also had been a radio operator on the steamship Humboldt between San Francisco and San Pedro.

He had been an operator since he was 17 years old.
