Wise Woman Knows Her Own Style Limitations

The principle factor to be considered by one in selecting a wardrobe is the important consideration of whether the style is suitable to one's personality and character. The smartly dressed woman is not necessarily one who follows the style parade. She is the one who realizes what she can wear best and stays within those limitations. Wini Shaw, sleek siren of Hollywood, is the type who can affect such extreme styles as the clinging se-in creation she wears, above.

Jane Froman, who is another type, appears to advantage in her metallic gown which has a court train and shoulder decoration to balance the simplicity of line. Jean Muir's striking blonde beauty is admirably set off by the Capri blue velvet creation she prefers for afternoon. On the other hand, few but Dolores del Rio could get away with a creation of such simplicity of line and daring décolletage as she wears.

U. S. V. HOSPITAL

By Ottavia K. Ashton

The veterans were delighted to have Casey Jones' orchestra play for them during the dinner hour on New Year's day. The members of the orchestra were as follows: Casey Jones, Paul LaChore, Jimmy McHenry and Ed Walcott. After dinner a half hour program was presented in the hospital for the benefit of the bed patients. Appropriate napkins were furnished by the U. S. V. auxiliary of Roseburg.

Our contract bridge tournament was brought to a close with L. Dodson and Dr. Funkhouser, representing the hospital patients, winning all honors from Lee Way and George Wood of the barracks. The "klutzes" claim, of course, that the boys from the barracks were having a run of bad luck.

Christmas gifts were too numerous to mention all of them last week. The Wauna unit of the American Legion auxiliary of Westport, Oregon, sent in twenty-five very attractive favors which were placed on the trays. A most acceptable gift of subscriptions to Time magazine, Popular Mechanics, Collier and Saturday evening Post was received from the American Legion auxiliary, unit number thirteen, Sitka, Alaska.

The Montana Federation of Women's clubs generously remembered the Montana men of this facility with large and beautifully wrapped gifts, also large red candles for their warms. Cigarettes were received from the state department of the U. S. V. auxiliary and the D. A. V. auxiliary. These gifts and only had the general Christmas spirit with them but the men were happy to be remembered by the folks back home. A box of assorted comfort articles was received from the American War Mothers of Bridgeton, Mo.

Some of the men have suggested that we organize a "Major Bowe's Amateur Hour." This is being given serious thought and will probably be in readiness by the time the recreational hall is opened.
