Student Fee Measure.

ONE OF the measures to be voted upon at the special election on January 31, is the "Bill authorizing student activity fees in state higher educational institutions" — that is the way the title reads on the ballot, plus the following: Purpose: To authorize the state board of higher education to levy and collect from students in the Oregon State college, the University of Oregon, and the state normal schools fees of not over $5.00 per term, of approximately three months each, for development and promotion of recreational and cultural student activities; the funds so collected to be administered by such organizations as the board may designate. You are asked to vote yes or no.

The News-Review favors the passage of this bill. Voluble arguments have to do with policies which should properly be determined by the state board of higher education.

The state of Oregon entrusts the entire operation of the institutions of higher learning to a board created for the purpose of administering the higher education program. This board is a board of able and intelligent people. The question of fees for student activities is one that the state board of higher education is better qualified to settle than any other person or group of persons. The board should have the right to pass upon this matter just as it has the right to pass upon all other matters in connection with higher education. The people are asked to either give the board this right or deny it. The News-Review believes the board capable of taking care of this matter and therefore favors the passing of the measure.

Although it has been generally stated that only three measures are to appear on the January 31 ballot, it now develops that there is a FOURTH measure. The fourth one is this: A constitutional amendment to give the legislature the right to name its own compensation for services. The student fee measure is discussed above. The other three measures will be analyzed and fully discussed in this column during the next two weeks.

freedom is now guaranteed by the constitution of the United States—can be told by the government what they can print and what they can't, the people of this country won't know what is going on. "Will that time," you ask, "ever come?" Well, when the constitution of the United States is referred to in the very highest governmental circles as a "trifle of the large and busy days," it is hard to say.

ANOTHER interesting news item

French newspapers, despite a linguistic denial from the foreign office, said today that France has asked Great Britain if, in the event of war with Italy, she will be willing to send British troops to the German border to replace police who might be needed in the south. That is a trick question. As things now stand, France has no intention of going to war with Italy, and England has no intention of sending British troops to the German border.

SUICIDE MOTIVES WILL BE STUDIED

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(AP)—On the theory that suicidal impulses should be treated as a preventable disease, seven prominent psychiatrists have organized a research committee to study the motives of suicide.

The group, called the "Committee for the Study of Suicides, Inc.," plans, according to its charter, to "study . . . classify . . . and disseminate knowledge . . . concerning the history and causes of, motives for and ways and means of prevention of suicides."

Financial support will come from Sarahah Kling, chairman of the Welfare Island Research council, and "several other contributors" whose names were not made known.

Sharp Teeth—But Can He Digest It?

LOVE DENIED

by Louise Long and Ethel Doherty

CHAPTER XXVIII She cuffed herself beside him on the couch, studying his face covertly. He didn't seem unhappy. He looked better than he had that day in the Standing house. She took heart again. "Working, Stuart?" Julie asked. "Not yet. . . Oh, those sketches—swore the soap people I had a new idea for an ad. They wired back to send along a sketch. So now I've got to find an idea."

One Word Led To Another

By Bugs Baer

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.) Panting for Breath We might as well start the new year with one of last year's decisions.

Judge Nova of Brooklyn rules that your wife can take money out of your pants pocket while you are asleep. At no time in history does that make her a thief. Though, during depression years, it might make her a magician.

Judge Nova further states that the various grades of higher and dicker courts hold that wives are immune from prosecution for burglarizing unattended trousseaus.

Vacant pants, like vacant lots, must be posted against trespassing.

Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty bonds and other forms of government collateral. You must protect yourself at all times. We ask four million members of the A. E. F. the meaning of the epithet, "Sleeper," in a dice game.

When a snake sheds its skin, or a locust its shell, they are through with those garments. They certainly never use the empty apparel as safe deposit vaults.

When a man sheds his pants he expects to use them again. And, even though temporarily absent from his sartorial domains, he still retains controlling interest in the discarded raiment and all the contents thereof.

In the days when tin-roofers were tailors the crumblers had their scanties constructed from blueprints out of the finest rust-proof chevrot. Their wives couldn't burglarize their knightly pants because you know how money rattles in a tin bank. One shake of the baggy kilts and it was setting off an alarm clock.

The chivalrous knight awakened, whacked the misuser over the unvarnished skull with a battle axe, meanwhile shouting, "For king and country." And, in parenthesis, he would take an extra wallop for himself.

But, modern law or ancient custom, no edict of lords or commons can protect unoccupied property against depredations of feminine curiosity and avarice.

The law says if you ain't wearing them they ain't yours.

So, do like my old man used to do. Don't take them off. They'll get baggy if you sleep in them. But, like the sacred whisks of the prophets, no one will trim them.

ADOLPH'S OBSERVATIONS

I don't know why it is but everybody seems to feel it a duty to tell me all their troubles. Things usually work out that way for a fellow if he is a good listener.

Sometimes a fellow is drawn to another when there is evidence of trouble. For instance, on the way home last night I encountered a little kid who was crying. He said he had two nickels and a tramp had taken one away from him. I asked him why he didn't holler for help and he said, "I couldn't. I have got an awful cold."

OREGON EVENTS FLASHED FROM WIRE SERVICE

BEND, Ore., Jan. 6.—(AP)—Florence Johnston, 29, Washington State college student returning from a holiday vacation at her home in Stockton, Cal., received fatal injuries in an automobile crash north of here. Bob Christy of Glendale, Cal., was driver of the car which skidded from the slippery road and overturned. He and two other Washington State college students escaped with minor injuries.

THE DALLES, Ore., Jan. 6.—(AP)—One of the most severe windstorms in years shattered plate glass windows, demolished signboards, uprooted trees and disrupted power and light service here over the week-end. The 51-mile-an-hour wind toppled poles, cutting off power service to Mosier. Power officials reported difficulty maintaining the current at The Dalles and Hood River.

SILVERTON, Ore., Jan. 6.—(AP)—A truckload of 25,000 small cutthroat trout was released in Silver creek about a mile above Silverton the past week.

BEND, Ore., Jan. 6.—The county court turned down a request for $178 to finance a county planning board survey of land ownership and tax delinquencies to determine farm tracts available for resettlement, and to classify other lands.

GASTON, Ore., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Nearly 1,000 acres of water rested today on what was once dry land. The dike, built last summer to keep the Tualatin river from refilling the Wapato lake bed, gave way. E. M. Sooter, lessee and tenant of the land which formerly was a favorite waterfowl hunting ground, estimated drainage and dike repair will cost $1,000. Burrowing gophers were blamed for weakening the retaining wall.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 4.—(AP)—One hundred and sixty-six items will be eliminated from state liquor stores and agencies Feb. 1, the state liquor control commission announced. Slow sales, lack of space and a federal ruling against credit purchases and returns were cited as reasons.

OSWEGO, Ore., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Yesterday's balloting resulted in a vote of 157 to 76 in favor of accepting a PWA loan and grant of $140,000 for the construction of a water system here.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 4.—(AP)—Frank La Belle, Jewell, Ore., barber charged with slaying Mrs. Myrtle Service in a hotel here Nov. 30, will go on trial here Jan. 30, Circuit Judge Robert Tucker ordered.
