

Commission to Defray Legion Convention Publicity Costs

NO SHARE ASKED OF BUSINESS FIRMS

Record Rally Forecast for Roseburg by Koehn, Who Bans "Rowdyism."

Business firms of Roseburg were relieved of expense of advertising the forthcoming state convention of the American Legion in Roseburg through the action taken by the convention commission in a special meeting last night.

The commission has contracted to pay from its own funds for all advertising and publicity appearing in the Oregon Legionnaire, official state publication of the American Legion. This paper, which goes to 10,000 Oregon Legionnaires, will give a great deal of pre-convention publicity, much of which will be furnished by the local commission, but instead of soliciting merchants for advertising contribution, is to have its advertising sponsored by the commission.

Record Rally Forecast
Plans for the state convention, to be held in August, were discussed by the commission with George L. Koehn, state commander, who expressed his belief that the meeting will be the largest ever held.

He advanced two reasons for this belief: first, that membership in the American Legion in Oregon has been increased by 2,000, and second, that the veterans will probably receive their bonus payments shortly prior to convention time.

Rowdyism Taboo
The state commander states that he is working to assure a clean and orderly convention for Roseburg, and will cooperate with the commission here in efforts to prevent any rowdyism.

"I intend to bring my 15-year old daughter to the Roseburg convention," Commander Koehn says, "and I am sure the meeting will be one that she can attend and enjoy without embarrassment. We want to take care of our business in an orderly way and still have lots of good clean fun."

Mrs. James Turnbull of Portland and Mrs. E. B. Stewart, representing the American Legion auxiliary, were present for the commission meeting yesterday.

MILK CONTROL LAW FAVORED BY MOST

SALEM, Jan. 10.—(AP)—The Oregon milk control law has found favor with a majority of milk producers, processors and distributors in this section. It was indicated at an all-day hearing before the milk control board yesterday.

Although not altogether favorable general testimony favored continuance of the act.
Some producers believed that retail prices should be increased somewhat due to higher feed prices, but distributors held out for no change, declaring a price increase would inevitably diminish consumption.

BONUS BILL GETS HOUSE APPROVAL

The proposal advanced in the effort of democratic leaders to send the White House a bill President Roosevelt would sign was reported to embrace full payment in government bonds—rather than cash. But the bonds would be made payable in cash on demand.

trial chair one week from tonight. Previously the governor had said the court was disposed to meet at the prison instead of the state house only if Hauptmann had a last-minute statement to make.

Hauptmann in his written request to appear, delivered to the governor a few days ago, limited it to an offer "to answer all questions."

Hauptmann, in questioning by Col. Mark O. Kimbrell, prison warden, has refused to change the story he told at Flemington—that he received the Lindbergh ransom money from Isidor Fisch, his partner who died in Germany.

It was reported today that Hoffmann went to the state prison death house secretly in October on assurances that Hauptmann would "talk" only to him. Hauptmann talked, but his story—it was said—was unchanged.

Asked today whether the story were true, and told that it had been attributed to him, the governor replied:

"I won't affirm it or deny it."
Mystery Angle
Governor Hoffman said later today a handwriting expert had expressed the definite opinion the writer of a letter signed "J. J. Faulkner," declaring Bruno Richard Hauptmann innocent was the signer of a bank deposit slip for $2,500 of Lindbergh ransom bills in 1933.

The governor asked whether the Faulkner letter, in his opinion, implicated anyone other than Hauptmann in the crime, said if the letter is from the same person who signed the slip it would be an indication "that someone other than Hauptmann was in the possession of some of the money."

To add to the mystery, a man named J. J. Faulkner committed suicide shortly after the money was deposited.

The governor was asked whether he had any evidence that "will break the case wide open?" He did not answer directly, but said: "I do not know what evidence may be presented by the defense."

He refused to say whether he had any evidence warranting a reprieve for Hauptmann should the court of pardons deny clemency.

Ethiopia has sent a strong protest to the league of nations, asking appointment of a commission to survey its claims that the fascist invaders have adopted a policy of "merciless extermination" with bombs.

Another Victory Reported
Unofficial sources reported 200 Italian native troops had been killed in an Ogaden province engagement. Six tanks, nine machine guns and radio equipment had been seized by the defending forces, it was reported.

(In the absence of official government advices, these casualties were presumed to have been suffered during a reported engagement.)

Is She the "Perfect Girl"?

Pose of Alice Shaughnessy

When 32,000 beauty experts went into a huddle and plected together a composite of "Miss Perfection", or their idea of what the perfect girl should be in measurement, pretty Alice Shaughnessy, Brooklyn model, put in a claim for the title because she is just about the personified replica of the experts' mythical model. Why not get out the tape measure, girls, and see how close you come to so-called perfection?

ROOSEVELT TO ASK NEW FARMING AID

appeal to the consumers of the nation" was presented to assembled farm leaders today by Secretary Wallace.

He told approximately 100 farm leaders at the new deal's post-AAA conference, that the smashed adjustment act had been "steadily directed to the general welfare."

But in opening the meeting Wallace gave no hint of what new farm program he approved.

Laying emphasis upon the importance of the meeting, the secretary said:

"Cliches" Scored
"The time has come for those who believe that the balanced welfare of agriculture is essential to the general welfare to speak plainly about obstructionists. I am sure that most business men and consumers are friendly to the farmer, but there are certain small but powerful cliques which have steadily fought all efforts on the part of this government and preceding governments to extend even a modest aid to agriculture."

"Some of these obstructionists to the agricultural welfare, as it relates to the general welfare, hope and believe the recent decision means the end of all effective governmental interest in the farm problem."

"Others are willing to buy the farmers off temporarily with unsound measures. A familiar method of the opposition is to split the farm groups among themselves."

"Challenge" Favored
"Wherever the obstructionists to the future welfare of agriculture and the nation may be found, no matter how openly or how obscurely they may borrow in the service of special interests and outworn principles, they ought to be challenged."

"This seems a suitable occasion to throw the spotlight of challenge upon them in the name of agriculture welfare and the general welfare. These obstructionists will be found in all parties from the extreme left to the extreme right. They will be found in all regions and classes, but of course they represent a minority."

"I know they can not speak for business men generally. Of the hundreds of encouraging telegrams that have come to us this week, an astonishingly high proportion are from country bankers, merchants and other independent business men. It is up to all who are constructively minded to push forward in the name of agricultural unity for the sake of national unity in the long run."

He lashed "obstructionists to the future welfare of agriculture," and flayed "special interests" that "would be delighted to give 6-cent cotton, 30-cent wheat, 5-cent lard, 8-cent tobacco to foreign nations."

After hearing Wallace, the farmers went to another auditorium in another agriculture department building where discussions, headed by their own chairmen, were begun. Wallace did not attend this session.

May Keep AAA Base

The atmosphere was cheerful, but the farm leaders appeared determined. A hurried survey disclosed no central interest in any single farm program but most farmers appeared insistent that something, as nearly like AAA as possible, should be drafted immediately.

Sentiment for a domestic allotment program was found among delegates from widely scattered areas.

Earlier, two developments had come to light.

1. Semi-official sources said the new deal hoped the conference would approve a composite farm-aid program. Under it benefits might continue to go out to farmers on a domestic allotment (subsidy) plan and balanced production might be sought by systematic soil conservation.

2. The "big five" groups of organized agriculture were said to have reached a tacit agreement, calling for the rejection of a dozen or more prominent substitute plans pending the proposal of an administration program.

3. Plans discarded into the discard—at least temporarily—were said to be:

1. Export subsidy.
2. Marketing agreements for basic commodities.
3. Forty-eight little AAA's for the states.
4. The export debenture.
5. The equalization fee.
6. (Federal leases or purchases of submarginal land).
7. A plan to guarantee the farmers their cost of production.
8. Constitutional amendment.

BANQUET ATTENDED BY MORE THAN 200

Dr. E. B. Stewart, past department commander, who presented the principal speaker.

The annual election of directors, instead of being conducted at the banquet meeting as in past years, was conducted by direct distribution of ballots to members only. These ballots were turned in at the meeting and were counted by a board composed of R. W. Masters, Maurice Hallmark and M. E. Rutter. The six new directors chosen for the 1936 chamber of commerce board were: Morris Bowser, George Caskey, Chester Morgan, Ivan Pickens, Paul Geddes and Hugh Ritchie.

BONUS CASHING MEANS $3,000,000 BENEFIT TO OREGON

100 for 1934.

The commission, he reports, owns approximately 1,500 parcels of land; about 500 pieces of farm property and 1,000 homes in cities. Of all of these properties, he says, practically all that are habitable are occupied by tenants paying a standard rental.

"In Portland we have 530 houses," Owen said, "and every house that is fit to live in is occupied. This to my mind shows a very healthy condition."

In fairness to private enterprise, he states, the commission makes a policy of keeping rentals and appraisals at the market. This keeps the state owned property out of competition with private real estate business. The state, however, endeavors, wherever possible, to negotiate sale of property held through delinquent or defaulted loan payments, in order to keep the property on the tax rolls.
