

SURVEY OF PAROLE SYSTEMS OPENED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The attorney general's $1,400,000 survey of the country's parole systems opened today with a "school" for regional directors and supervisors.

Plans for studying the lives of 150,000 released prisoners to discover the effect of parole, probation, commutation, suspended sentences and other methods of release in fitting the convict back into society will be explained to supervisors who will direct about 1,400 "white collar" workers.

Records of prisons, courts, social agencies and parole officers and probation agencies will be combed in the "census" of released convicts.

Justin Miller, administrative director of the study, will school regional directors in their work of compiling state laws for the release of prisoners, and surveying the facilities of the states for keeping prisoners and checking up on them after they leave the penitentiary walls.

A third group of workers in Washington will later correlate the work of the directors and the work of the white collar workers to seek the most effective systems for supervising released convicts.

For the survey, the country has been divided into eleven regions with a director and field supervisor in each. Those already assigned include:

Tenth region (Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho)—James M. Brown, Montana lawyer, former assistant general counsel of war risk insurance division, headquarters Seattle.

Other officers are Dr. A. W. Chance, vice president, and Dr. Frederick W. Stricker, secretary. Both live in Portland.

The physicians approved establishment of a state division of county health units, and maternity and child hygiene, to meet provisions of the Social Security Act.

The board urged muzzling of dogs as a measure for rabies control.

POLITICS CHARGED IN FARM AID PLAN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Senator Robert D. Carey (R., Wyo.), charged today that the new farm program suggested by farm organizations and administration leaders was an attempt to keep up the flow of money to farmers until after the election.

Carey said the new program, tinging on payment of benefits to farmers for soil conservation, was "getting right back where they were before."

"We are proposing a law," he said, "that won't stand up in the supreme court. They know it won't. But if they can get by until after election and have money to give to the farmers, that is all they want to do."

Carey reiterated his opinion that it is possible to draft legislation that would take care of the farm problem and be constitutional.

"It does not have to be regimentation in order to do this," he said. "Under the proposed bill the farmer would be dictated to just as under the AAA."
