

BUSINESS SPEECHES MADE AT ROTARY

The business government, not only federal but state, county and municipal, is everybody's business, said Theo. P. Cramer, Jr., secretary of the Oregon Bankers' association, speaking before the Roseburg Rotary club yesterday. Business men, he said, are interested in facts and results regardless of what political party brings them. What business wants from government is a uniformity in policy so that it may know what it can depend upon from one year to the next.

Mr. Cramer also gave some figures regarding the increasing costs of government during the last 20 years. In that period government cost has increased 260 per cent while population has increased less than 25 per cent, and at the present time the public debt is being increased at the rate of $500 per minute.

George H. Greenwood, of the Bank of California in Portland, spoke briefly regarding the work of the association.

STATE DEMOCRATS INVITED TO MEET

Democratic men and women of Douglas county are invited by the democratic state central committee, in a message received here today, to attend a meeting February 3 at Portland, where Miss Mary Dewson, general advisory chairman of the democratic national committee, will be the principal speaker. Miss Dewson is to speak at a morning meeting for women, a democratic luncheon at noon and an open forum in the afternoon Monday. Tuesday night she will confer with members of the Young Democratic League of Oregon at a dinner followed by an open meeting at the Portland hotel. Nancy Wood Honeyman, vice-chairman of the democratic state central committee, is arranging for the conference and meeting for Miss Dewson.

SAN SOUSSI TRUCK DEDICATION SET

The Sans Soussi Clipper, a fast truck equipped for treatment of turkey diseases, is to be dedicated at a public ceremony at Stephens and Oak streets at 2 p. m. Saturday. The truck has been especially prepared by Carl Richmond, proprietor of the Sans Soussi Turkey ranch, for a free service to turkey growers in handling problems of disease and feeding, and is prepared to render service at all times and to all parts of the county.

The dedication is to be made by

Prospects Better for College Graduates of 1936, Indications From Alumni Survey

By COURTLAND SMITH
ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Just no longer need be a nightmare to haunt the otherwise complacent dreams of the American college senior.

From every present indication the young man or woman with a college degree can enter the business world in 1936 with the best chance in years of finding an opening somewhere, if not in the very field or profession of his choosing.

Not that executive positions have been reserved, at $5,000 a year, for those who will do the cap and gown next June! It is simply that their prospects upon graduation are brighter than they have been at any time since 1930.

Students who were graduated from American colleges and universities during the past few years have not had an easy lot. Until recently comparatively few have found work in the fields for which they prepared themselves, and those fortunate enough to find openings discovered the salary scale far below that of a decade ago.

Women who prepared themselves for a teaching career found better opportunities in clerical work while many men who had earned teachers' certificates discovered various kinds of unskilled labor to be their only recourse.

Depression Hits Graduates

The depression hit those graduating from the professional schools in like manner in many cases and master's and doctor's degrees brought no assurance of employment.

According to an extensive survey conducted among graduates of the University of Michigan by Professor George E. Myers, an authority on vocational education and guidance, earnings have been amazingly low among alumni who earned degrees in 1932 and 1933, probably the worst years of the depression.

Both men and women who had found teaching positions averaged $875 annually. Approximately 15 per cent reported annual earnings of $500 or less and only 5 per cent reported making more than $1500.

Engineers drew an average salary of $1250 a year; lawyers $1325; dentists $1820. Graduates of the Literary college (general course) made only $1120 annually since leaving college; co-eds $1000.

Two years after leaving college, observes Professor Myers, "a considerable number had been unable to find work of any kind A much larger number, especially graduates of the Literary college, the College of Engineering, the College of Architecture, and the School of Education, had found it necessary to engage in work quite different than they had planned. On the whole they were earning much less than similar graduates received eight or ten years ago."

"Other surveys show that five years after graduation nearly one-third of the women who were graduated with certificates eligible to teach in 1929 were earning less than $1000 per year."

Conditions Now Better

Considering the fact that the University of Michigan, with an enrollment of approximately 9000 students and a graduating class of some 2500 young men and women, is a typical American institution of higher learning, it is reasonable to assume that the employment situation of its alumni during the past few years is indicative of the general trend among college graduates throughout the United States.

The depression made no distinction between the college graduate and the laboring man. There was no charm attached to a university degree that would unlock the door of employment.

However, graduates of last June are finding the way is easier. Gradually they are stepping into this field or that vocation although salaries are not what they were 10 years ago by any means.

Barring another collapse in the economic order of the world, those who venture forth after commencement day next June will find smoother sailing.

WOOL

BOSTON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The Commercial Bulletin of Boston will say tomorrow:

"Sales of domestic wools at the seaboard markets have dwindled perceptibly. There has been a fair movement in foreign wools at about parity prices, with a slightly firmer market."

"Foreign markets have continued generally firm. London closed Thursday generally 5 to 10 per cent above the previous sales closing rates."

"Manufacturers have a fair backlog of business for future delivery, although some mills are running lower on orders."

"In the west, the outstanding demand has been the further contracting of unshorn wool in Texas. About 10,000,000 pounds have been taken at 30 to 31 cents."

"Mohair here is moderately active in small lots to woolen mills."

CAR MISHAP TOLL SHOWS LITTLE DROP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—(AP)—The commerce department reported today that 86 major cities made a slightly better automobile accident record in 1935 than in 1934.

In 1935 the death rate per 100,000 of population was 25.5, compared with 24.2 in 1934.
