

POLITICAL ENEMIES ARGUE OVER LINCOLN

Ickes and Talmadge Voice Divergent Views About Former President.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Divergent interpretations of Abraham Lincoln as a president who "scuttled the American constitution" and as a man who knew it was impossible to "hoo-doo" yourself back to prosperity, were contemplated today by political leaders.

Two bitter political foes, Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes and Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, speaking from the same platform last night presented their views of the Civil War president in present day political terms.

Ickes, a former republican, spoke of Lincoln's willingness to end slavery despite the constitution. "It appears to have been Abraham Lincoln," said Ickes, "who scuttled the American constitution, set up a dictatorship, threw the supreme court into the Potomac river and declared a moratorium on congress."

Gov. Talmadge, a democrat and foe of the administration, wailed "a man like Lincoln" were present now. "He would never allow a brain trust's creed to touch the doctrine that you can hoo-doo yourself back to prosperity," said the Georgian.

Both gave high praise to Lincoln, who was born 127 years ago today. They confined their addresses to prepared manuscripts.

Each made a separate trip to Oak Ridge cemetery to place wreaths on Lincoln's tomb.

Old Campaign Cited
Ickes compared the present day Liberty League with those who charged Lincoln attempted to replace the constitution with a dictatorship.

"General George B. McClellan ran against him for president in 1860 on a 'save the constitution' platform," Ickes said. "We seem to have many George McClellans now."

He described as "copperheads," a term formerly applied to northern sympathizers with the confederacy, those who objected "when a president had interested himself in the cause of the plain people, when he is determined to equate economic opportunities."

Talmadge, the first southern governor to pay homage at the emancipator's shrine here, said the nation should emulate Lincoln's example "and not run wild on a dream that the government owes us all a living."

The governor commented briefly on current issues.

While the sheriff eloped the burglar ransacked his home, stealing his billfold which contained $30 and his driver's license. The billfold was on the dresser a few feet from the sheriff's bed.

"NO STUDYING ALLOWED"

There will be no studying of textbooks, reference books and theses in this room. The picture is a reproduction of the "browsing room"—an interesting part of the new library at the University of Oregon, which is fast rising from what once was termed Kincaid field.

"No studying allowed in this room." This sign, or one similarly worded, will appear over the door of the most conspicuous and important room in the new University of Oregon library, now under construction and expected to be ready for occupancy next fall.

The room, which will be comfortably furnished by friends of the library, will be for pleasure reading only, and the atmosphere and furniture have been planned to conform to this idea. It has tentatively been called the "browsing room," and will be open to all students. In place of the usual rows of desks, it will have easy chairs, davenport, attractive floor lamps, and at each end a fireplace, which on cool winter days will hold a cheery fire, will add a home-like touch.

Books to Line Walls
Walls will be lined with books, most of which will be gifts, all in shelves conveniently placed for easy inspection. An attendant will be on hand, not to enforce quiet and discipline, but to offer friendly advice and to charge out volumes the students may wish to take out overnight.

The plans for the structure have placed the browsing room on the main floor, in the space between the two principal entrances. It is to be a room 25 by 90 feet, with a north exposure that will provide ample daylight. Partial walls will divide the room into three sections. Wide doors, each of glass so that students passing by may look into the inviting spot, will be provided at each end.

Used to Bequile
"The room is not to be a retreat for accomplished book-lovers, but a means of bequiling for non-reading students," explains Karl W. Outbank, dean of personnel of the university, and a member of the committee that worked out the idea for the project.

"It is to be free from all odor of requirement and to be baited by the choicest lures of the book trade. Once a student is 'hooked' we hope he will remain a 'victim' of good reading and good books for the rest of his life. Such a service, in, we feel, as important for a university library to render as handing out required readings to book-bored credit-hunters."

The room will be furnished largely by funds to be raised by a group known as "friends of the University Library," and from gifts already available for this purpose.

The library, which will cost approximately $400,000 when completed, has been made possible by a PWA grant and loan to the university. Work on it has been under way since last summer, and it is expected to be ready for occupancy next fall. It will contain three full stories and a basement, and will be modern and up-to-date in every way.
