

NEW PHASE GIVEN HIAWATHA LEGEND

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—(AP)—Delving into Indian legend, the Smithsonian institution bobbed up today with evidence that Minnehaha, bride of Hiawatha, was put on the spot by a "super-gauntlet."

Seeking to separate fact from myth in the famous story, Dr. J. N. B. Hewitt, Smithsonian ethnologist, made public this version.

Hiawatha, a man of "decided liberal leanings" and social viewpoint, had a stepbrother who was just the opposite. This stepbrother, an Onondaga Indian named Wa-Ta-Do-Do-Ho, was a "ruthless gangster" and with a "hand of rattlers" he terrorized his tribe. Anybody who opposed him was "put on the spot."

Disgusted with this gang rule, Hiawatha tried to organize a rival party, "but could obtain no followers for obvious reasons."

Now, Wa-Ta-Do-Do-Ho would have liked to kill Hiawatha, but he "did not dare, because Hiawatha's mother was a Mohawk Indian and that powerful tribe would have risen to do vengeance on the slayer."

So Wa-Ta-Do-Do-Ho "compromised" by murdering Minnehaha ("The Lovely Laughing Water") and her children.

"She was an Onondaga," it was explained, "and her children were Onondagas, and it was no concern of the Mohawks what happened to them."

Leaves "Biggest Hearted Man"

Mrs. Margaret J. Munsell

Alexander Munsell

"He thought more of humanity than he did of his family. His theory may be very inspiring but it doesn't work out practically in home life," explained Mrs. Margaret Munsell, left, former Wellesley student, in announcing plans for divorcing Alexander Munsell of Tucson, Ariz., termed the "biggest-hearted man in the world" when he gave away a $1,000,000 inheritance and took up lodging in a government flop house.

When Hiawatha returned to his lodge and discovered the deed he was "temporarily insane" and wandered into the wilderness. He came under the influence of the Indian preacher, Degawawida, and their partnership resulted in "the strange politico-religious system, based on the doctrine of human brotherhood," which entered into the league of the Iroquois, a confederation of tribes.

Dr. Hewitt is working with details furnished nearly 40 years ago by a blind Iroquois ritual leader, whose version is said to indicate "considerable historical validity."

Legends attaching to Hiawatha's

name have been used in literature, notably by Longfellow.

OREGON EVENTS FLASHED FROM WIRE SERVICE

PENDLETON, Ore., Feb. 13.—(AP)—Apparently authentic reports to state police told today of large numbers of ducks, quail and pheasants starving to death in the Pilot Rock and Ukiah districts.

It was said deer carcasses also were in evidence. The section has been snow-covered several weeks.

MEDFORD, Ore., Feb. 13.—(AP)—The depression started Vernon Hopkins, Dead Indian Springs district rancher, into the trapping business. This month he collected $114 bounties for 32 coyotes and six bobcats. In December his check was $186 for 62 coyotes.

CORVALLIS, Ore., Feb. 13.—(AP)—Dr. E. O. Sisson of Reed college addressing the home interests conference in session here today, scored the practice of keeping the "American temple of education" filled with European material.

"We must put this old world stuff in its place so that American ideas can come in," he said.

Julius Caesar has been studied in high school more than Lincoln, Washington and Jefferson combined, he pointed out.

BEND, Ore., Feb. 13.—(AP)—A postal business boom has cheered the "entire" populace of the one-man town of Millican.

W. A. Rahn, mayor, sole resident and postmaster, said proudly today that money order receipts last quarter were $570.51—three times as great as for the same three months last year, and continue high.

But sale of stamps last year was not very brisk, said Rahn as he stood in his combined store, service station, postoffice and city hall. Most high desert people appear to carry their own mail, he said.

CHILTON, Ore., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Southern Pacific railway is constructing approximately 2100 feet of additional railway siding here. The construction is in anticipation of increased lumber and log shipments from the mills and camps of the Flora Logging company which will start operations Monday, and to handle output of the Trask-Williams Lumber company which expects to resume operations March 2.

CORVALLIS, Ore., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Howard Ballard escaped possible death here when he was imprisoned in a dry kiln. Ballard, a research fellow at Oregon State college, found the door of the kiln hatched when he ended a brief inspection. He pounded on the walls until rescuers arrived.

SHERIDAN, Ore., Feb. 14.—(AP)—Dr. Raymond B. Culver of Linfield college told a Lincoln day banquet audience here that "what we need is not a new form of government but rather a new form of association of what we have. There is no room for communism or fascism in America."

In 1860 Mark A. Cooper erected a monument at Cartersville, Ga., in honor of 35 friends who had endorsed notes for him.

EX-OFFICIAL KILLS SELF IN MANILA

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 13.—(AP)—Manuel E. Earnshaw, 72, former Philippine resident commissioner to the United States, shot and killed himself, authorities said, in the family mausoleum today.

Coroner's and police officials said there was no question but his death was a suicide.

Earnshaw, one of Manila's most prominent business men, served as resident commissioner in Washington, D. C., from 1917 to 1927. He was a close personal friend of President Manuel Quezon, of the Philippine commonwealth.

Blind for more than half a century, Chris Hansen, of Champaign, Ill., at 97 attributes his longevity to temperance in all things, especially eating, and refusal to worry. The loss of his eyesight has never been an insurmountable handicap. At 77, he married.

Twenty-two men were executed in Texas during the past year, among them Raymond Hamilton, notorious bandit. This compares with an average of 16 executions per year for the preceding 12 years.

U. S. POLITICAL OBSERVATIONS

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington.)

There are special reasons why the dominant leaders of the republican party are deeply interested, indeed, in Senator Borah's decision to enter the presidential primary in Ohio.

If it merely were a question of delegates — of a few votes, more or less, in the national convention — no one would be greatly concerned. But what Mr. Borah is after amounts to a great deal more than that.

Ohio is a proud state in republican tradition. This year it will entertain, at Cleveland, the national convention. It commands almost the largest bloc of electoral votes in that mid-western sector where many politicians believe the election of 1936 will be decided.

Against that background Mr. Borah proposes to submit to a popular test his demand that the present leadership of the party be repudiated by the rank and file.

Particularly, he asks for a popular verdict against the convention plans of the old-line leaders. These plans, as announced in the various states, contemplate the selection of untried delegates in the east and mid-west, including Ohio, in sufficient numbers to hold the balance of power with respect to the nomination.

A Psychological Blow
Suppose Borah wins his case at the hands of the republican voters of that crucial state. What becomes of the plans of the leaders, morally and psychologically, and what becomes of their leadership?

The answer need not involve, except incidentally, the much-discussed question whether Borah seriously is a candidate, or whether he has any idea he can be nominated.

He has said quite directly that his first concern is the breaking down of the present leadership, which he regards as reactionary. That fits in exactly with his heat-conduct, his determination not to go into states where he feels the sort of verdict he is seeking would be foreclosed.

His lingering progress toward an actual announcement obviously has not resembled the usual coyness of presidential aspirants. His tentative and cautious footsteps have been more like those of a wise pedestrian crossing an ice-covered street in traffic.

Convention Possibilities
Whatever the immediate effect of the Ohio venture, by way of forcing the hands of other candidates, it is the more remote possibilities of which the senator obviously is thinking.

If he wins in Ohio, but has too small a total of delegate strength to make him a serious contender for the nomination, what will be his role in the convention?

Many guesses are possible, but the circumstances keep bringing back to mind a scene in another national convention many years ago. At Baltimore, in 1912, the leading candidate in a deadlock was Champ Clark. In a single dramatic speech, William Jennings Bryan blasted forever Clark's vision of the white house. The burden of that speech was that Clark had the support of Wall Street. Is Borah preparing, similarly, to assume the mantle of spokesman for the rank and file, so that he can upset the chances of some other candidate? And if so, what candidate?

Miss Gladys Pinnell, returned missionary from Africa, speaks 7:50 Friday at the Friendly Four-square Church.—Adv.

WE had been missing the boat

I'm talking about coffee. We fooled around for ages with one brand after another. But none of them ever tasted right. We wondered why we never got a decent tasting coffee. Blamed the directions; yes, the coffee pot, too. And the only reason we let the agony endure was because we figured that our old time favorite brand—Hills Bros.—cost more than we could afford to pay.

But last week we woke up. My wife said, "Let's buy a pound of Hills Bros. and have coffee we can really enjoy." So she bought a can and that first cup was certainly good news. After breakfast my wife said, "Do you want to know something? Hills Bros. Coffee costs practically the same as most of the brands I've been buying and it's miles ahead in flavor." Can you tie that? We certainly had been missing the boat and that's no fairy tale.
