fore, urging our people to contribute promptly and most generously, so that sufficient funds may be available for the relief of these thousands of your homeless fellow citizens. I am confident that in the face of this great need your response will be as immediate and as generous as has always been the case when the Red Cross has acted as your agent in the relief of human suffering.

Capital Fights Flood
Rapidly rising waters pounded at the edges of the capital today. The weather bureau predicted the crest of the Potomac river flood would reach the city at 6 p. m.

Against this hour, a tired army of 1,500 relief workers stacked sandbag on sandbag to build a great dike to protect $100,000,000 worth of government buildings and historic shrines in the capital's downtown section.

All plane service to and from Washington was halted. Motor boats were cruising over the flooded airport. Air transport companies shifted their landing place to Logan field, Baltimore.

Boiling field, from which the army moved its planes yesterday, was covered with water from 2 to 5 feet deep.

The naval air station adjoining was flooded and water was in the hangars. Planes were moved away yesterday.

Bodies of two unidentified men were floating down the Potomac shortly before noon.

The floor of the "chain bridge" above the capital just topped the flood. It usually swings 26 feet above the channel.
