Cost of Government.

THE National Association of Manufacturers has recently published a little pamphlet entitled "Facts About the Rise in Government Costs." You might call the facts presented testimony of a prejudiced witness but all of us are prejudiced when this subject is under consideration.

The following paragraphs taken from this pamphlet speak for themselves:
The cost of government mounted slowly from the beginning of the century until the entrance of the United States into the World War. After the war years government costs declined somewhat but the steady expansion of federal, state and local governmental activities shows expenditures in 1935 to be more than 10 times those of 1900.

Even under present conditions the number of persons gainfully occupied in the United States is about 13 million higher than in the year 1915. The growth in costs of federal, state and local governments up to 1935 raised the average annual expenditures for each worker to $216 a year, or over $26 a month.

From the first quarter of 1933 to the last quarter of 1935 the number of non-military employees of the federal government has increased 40%. The fastest rates of growth in this period have been in agriculture, interior and labor departments. The departments of justice and commerce lead those showing a decline.

The total number of government employees at present is 3,400,000, with one-third of these in civil and military service of the federal government, and the remainder in state and local activities. These figures do not include individuals receiving relief, government pensions, veterans assistance, and CCC members.

The debt of the federal government, the states, and all other political subdivisions, is now 50 billion dollars. This represents an increase of over 1500% from the 3 billion public debt of 1909. Over the same period population of the United States has grown 67%—from 76 to 127 million persons.

vide about the right space. These old letters and postals tell a story of their own.

On May 11, 1897, John Shook wrote from Dairy: "If convenient, I wish you would send $25, as he is expecting some money to pay his bills at Eugene. Send the money to Eugene, Oregon."

The money was sent. The Brick Store, you see, was more than just a store. It was banker as well as merchant for its community. Whatever the needs of its people were, it took care of them.

FROM Steele Swamp, down in California, on December 10, 1897, A. J. Jackson wrote to the Brick Store: "Please send 2 lbs. citron, 3 lbs. currants and oblige."
It was December 10, you see, and Christmas was just in the offing. One can imagine that there was fruit cake down in Steele Swamp that year.

FROM Royston, Oregon, dated in early December, 1896, came a postal card bearing this message: "Please send by return stage, if possible, a pair of boy's strong leather boots, full stock kip, size 2. Send price, and money will be sent by return stage."

"Boy's strong leather boots, size 2." Do you reckon the boy they were intended for had an inkling they were coming? And, if so, don't you reckon the days before Christmas were long beyond belief?

You'll know all about it if you happened to live back in the '90s and your heart beat for a pair of boots, size 2.

A LATER postcard, also from Royston, Oregon, follows. It reads:

"The No. 2 boots proved to be too big. Will you please exchange them for a pair of No. 1's? Would like them with copper toes, if you have them."

P OOR kid! His boots were too big, and had to be sent back, and he had to wait the CENTURIES and CENTURIES that must elapse before the new ones came.

This writer, at a tender age, became likewise the possessor of a pair of copper-toed boots, but, alas! when they came one was a No. 2 and the other a No. 1, and the town was a long, long way off, and the roads were hub-deep in mud. We protested earnestly, even fervently, that a boot of one size for one foot and of another size for the other was the way we liked boots; that, in fact, we could hardly bear to think of having them any other way.

But parents were firm, and the boots had to go back, and the time intervening between when they were sent back and the new ones finally arrived can only be calculated in terms of geologic periods.

When a small boy is waiting for something he wants very badly indeed, time walks with leaden feet.

T HE point to be made here is that the Brick Store took back the No. 2 boots and returned the No. 1's, copper toes and all, and happiness prevailed in Royston when the package arrived.

O BSERVING what goes on about us today, it's a little hard to realize that so short a time back as the late '90's a pair of copper-toed boots could bring so much joy. But they DID.

We hear a lot of talk about the world slipping backward toward the dark ages, instead of going forward steadily toward something better and constantly better, but if we are as smart as we ought to be we won't believe too much of it.

It has gone a long way since the '90's, and the little enough that ordinary people have now is BIG as compared with what they had then.

DOUGLAS WATERS CLOSED TO ANGLERS

Announcement was made today by the state game commission of waters to be closed to fishing in Douglas county during the coming season. The order makes only few changes from last season.

The commission granted the request of the South Umpqua Rod and Gun club for the closing of the South Umpqua falls to fishing. The falls block the passage of fish, and have proven a temptation to poachers. A deadline is established 100 feet below the falls in the new order.

The outlet of Tahkenitch lake is closed from a point one mile above the highway bridge to the ocean. Steamboat creek is to remain closed this season. The creek was closed by the commission last year in order to preserve the creek and its tributaries as a spawning grounds for steelheads. The commission seriously considered closing all of the small streams tributary to the North Umpqua river, but decided such action would cause too much confusion.

Silent creek and Short creek, which feed Diamond lake, were closed, to prevent interference with spawning, while Lake creek, outlet of the lake was closed for a distance of 800 feet, which prevents fishing in the vicinity of the hatchery. The usual boundary line was established in Diamond lake. Rock creek on the North Umpqua is closed inside the hatchery reservation.

Lake creek, at Leon lake, is closed from the falls to the lake. Fishing season in Diamond lake was established from May 25 to November 1.

"WIFE IN CUSTODY"
By BEATRICE LUBITZ

CHAPTER X
Irene exploded again when she saw Agnes. This time there was a real scene. Agnes had lately gone girlish and the effect even Anastasia, who usually on general principles opposed Irene, had to admit was pretty awful. In her effort to look young because Carl was so youthful, Agnes, with the Riley thoroughness, had carried measures to extremes. She wore an entirely new light blue velvet dress and had arranged her hair in curls on top of her head.

She came into the bedroom a little hesitantly and Irene who was being ministered to by the maid, nearly collapsed when she saw her. Stella, who had on her long squirrel wrap and was carefully pulling on long pearl-gray gloves, dissolved into weak laughter.

"My Lord, Agnes," she choked, "where in the name of heaven did you get that rig? No wonder you hid in your room with it!" Agnes burst into tears. Irene stormed. Anastasia commanded shortly: "Take off that truck, Irene, lend her your black net dress. Hurry up, young lady, we ain't got much time. Mary, comb out my daughter's hair and shake your stumps." Stella, run into Agnes' room and find her a slip and black slippers.

They all fell to redressing Agnes who was like putty in the hands of others. "Now don't sweat up the arm-pits of this dress, you fool," Irene snapped. She had her hat on now and was pawing the ground with impatience.

Finally they were ready to go. Anastasia, Irene and Walter and Agnes and Carl, looking frightened and uncomfortable in correct morning wedding attire, went in the limousine with their liveried chauffeur while Stella and Jerry, Ethel and Eddie went in a hired car with another liveried chauffeur. There was a short quarrel in the foyer as to who was to go in which car.

But when they arrived at the Terhune apartment they really presented an imposing group. With the exception of Agnes, who was only passable, the other three were noticeably attractive women. Anastasia herself was magnificent with her high square shoulders and firmly planted head. In her youth Anastasia had been able to carry a pail of water on her head while running without spilling a drop.

Irene was carried off by old Mrs. Terhune, a silvery old lady with a quavering voice and lovely old blue eyes in a face like cracked porcelain. "My dear," she said to Irene as she took her wrap, "it is so lovely and dear of you to come here to us for the ceremony. We appreciate it so much. I hope you'll be happy. Oh! I know you and Dick will be so happy. He's in the next room with father waiting for you. Dick, come in, dear, I have brought you brides."

Dick came in swiftly from his father's room. He came directly to Irene's side. "Dear," he whispered. He took both her hands; then drew his mother to him with his free hand. "I never knew it was possible to be so happy." He laughed joyously. Irene put her cheek against his. She was nearly as tall as he. She looked at his tiny sensitive face, his full wide mouth, deep blue eyes like his mother's, behind the tortoise-shell glasses he habitually wore. She liked his glasses, they suited him and gave his face a homelier, less acetetic look.

"I love you, Dick," Irene looked deeply into his eyes. "I do want to make you so happy." He kissed her. "Darling!" He kissed her mother and Irene leaned over and kissed her too. "Oh Dick, thank you for my lovely flowers! It was an sweet of you to send each of us a corsage. Mother was so pleased."

Mr. Terhune came in. He was a twin to his wife, silvery, fragile, his blue-lined hands extended. "Greetings, my daughter," he said simply. "Thank you . . . father." He kissed her tenderly, then his wife and then his son. There was something so genuinely beautiful in his greeting that Irene felt the tears rise to her eyes. Dick's eyes behind his glasses were moist.

The big wood-paneled living room was now comfortably filled with people. As Irene entered her eye involuntarily sought her mother and sisters. They made an attractive group by the window, Anastasia leaning on her son's arm. A wave of love suffused Irene. How handsome they were. She gave them a brilliant smile. They were proud of Irene, proud of themselves. Among the guests were some of New York's oldest families: The Upshys, the Dimars, Colonel and Mrs. Ten Eyck, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Chase, the Copley-Blakes. The Rileys looked as good as the best!

Truly the Rileys had come a long way. The simple ceremony over, there was served, in the dining room adjoining, a wedding breakfast (the Rileys secretly thought it extremely vulgar). Only Anastasia of the Rileys could appreciate the wine. She knew wines, for she had been for eight years before her marriage in the kitchen of the Hasseblinks, the big Brooklyn beer king.

The young couple left shortly after to the gay accompaniment of handfuls of rice and good wishes. The guests slowly dispersed. In the other car Anastasia and Agnes were indulging in a Riley complimentary orgy. They agreed that Irene looked beautiful; that Dick was the nicest member of his family and of all his friends and that the Rileys were actually the cream of the party.

HOUSING ADVICE TO BE OFFERED PUBLIC

Federal Program Will Be Explained at Meeting Here Tonight.

The federal housing meeting this evening, under the auspices of the Douglas county better housing committee will be held in the council chambers at the city hall, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

Speakers scheduled to address the meeting will have important information for those involved in the sale of merchandise, material and service used in the repair and modernization of property. The building of new homes and equipping them with modern household appliances.

Citizens of Roseburg will be shown how everyone in the community can benefit through active cooperation with the federal housing program.

Meetings of this character have had an important influence on the stimulation of building activities in other Oregon communities, and it is believed that the credit facilities made available through the various phases of the national housing act present the opportunity for equally beneficial use in Douglas county.

The meeting will be open to the public, and anyone interested in the encouragement of improved housing conditions is invited to be present.

FOUR-H CLUB ACTIVITIES

The 4-H canning club of Days Creek, which is led by Mrs. Ray Wright, served a luncheon at the school Friday noon. Besides the club, the meeting was also attended by Mrs. Clarinda Rhoads, community chairman of the 4-H club work, and E. A. Britton, county club agent.

This club is making a quilt which will be sold at a program to be held later, the proceeds to be used for a 4-H summer school scholarship for some member of the club. There are many questions regarding the policy of the club which will be taken up with Mr. Britton and plans made for a program to be given jointly by the canning club and the cookery club, the date of which will be Friday evening, April 17th.

Besides the Days Creek entertainment provided, the 4-H club entertainers, consisting of the Horner family orchestra of Glide; Helen White and Judith Hodges, hill-billy singers of Melrose; Allan Corde, accordionist, and the French twins, tap dancers of Roseburg, will contribute to a full hour's program. Following the entertainment there will be a sale of luncheon and fishing in the fish pond.

The Glide grange has been omitted in previous lists of summer school scholarship donors. It should be explained now that the Glide Grange voted early in December to give a scholarship to some outstanding club member of that community. Other granges which have pledged scholarships are Riversdale, Sutherlin, Teunille, Melrose, Lookingglass and Leon Lake. Other scholarships have been offered by A. C. Masters of the Roseburg National bank, Roseburg Dairy and Soda Works, Tipton's Dairy, California Oregon Power company, Montgomery Ward & Co. and Winston P.T.A. (4). One or two more granges are expecting to provide scholarships, as are some other P.T.A. organizations and community clubs.

The last issues of Hoard's Dairyman magazine included for use in a national contest of new judging by Douglas county 4-H livestock club members have been sent out to the boys who will soon send in their placings. These placings will be sent in to Hoard's Dairyman, who is sponsoring the contest for a scoring of the various placings. The county winner is to receive the A. C. Masters' cow judging scholarship.

The next 4-H local leaders' meeting will be held Tuesday evening, April 14, in the music room of the junior high school. It is expected that H. C. Seymour, state club leader, will be present. The leaders of Green and Brockway districts are arranging a fine entertainment for this meeting. Since this meeting precedes the 4-H club marketing day program by only four days, it is planned also to include the members of the chamber of commerce in this meeting. Final plans will be made for the marketing day program which will be given for the benefit of those eighth graders who completed the 4-H marketing project.

The following enrollments have been received of new clubs organized during the last week: Green school, marketing project; Agnes Wilcox, leader; Stanley Inley, president; Lawrence Adams, vice president; Merritt Burt, secretary; and Allan Blake, Robert Inley, Robert Davis, Carleton Preston, Margie Mullins and Marjiam Claypool.

Wilbur school, marketing project; K. M. Thompson, leader; Doris Abell, president; Alta LaRant, vice president; Velma Crocker, secretary; and Ruth Hill, John Pritch, Junior Brown and Via Rodgers.

secretary, and Bob Smith. Camas Valley school, clothing project; Mrs. P. M. Paulson, leader; Polly Roberts, president; Kathleen Standley, vice president; Eunice Hoffman, secretary; and Genevieve Huntley, Marie Siegel, Virginia Coon, Doris Church and Lorine Perry.

Camas Valley school, cookery project; Mrs. Thos. Siegel, leader; Carol Baker, president; Betty Seifert, vice president; Marjorie Crocker, secretary; and Marion Annis, Rosella Adamak and Evelyn Paulson.

At the Nonpareil school the following projects have been chosen: being taken up as individuals: Royal Abene, poultry project; Joan Shirley and Genevieve Smith, cookery project; Marie Shirley and Virginia Smith, cookery project, and Virginia Smith and Marie Shirley, clothing project.

An interested crowd of observers yesterday saw Clarence Dunlap, KRRR radio engineer, install warning lights on the broadcasting station's antenna mast.

Working 140 feet above the roof of the Umpqua hotel on which the steel pole is mounted, Dunlap rigged two lights, which will warn aviators of the presence of the mast.

While such lights are not required by law, as planes are prohibited from flying under 1,500 feet over towns, the lights are being installed by KRRR as a precautionary measure in the event of emergencies.

The Roseburg fire department aided him in completing the work by turning on a strong spotlight from the fire truck at the city hall.

The 135-foot steel mast is heavily braced with phosphor bronze cable, and Dunlap said there was no appreciable sway to the tower. He found the cold wind very disagreeable, however.

LEG BADLY CUT IN FALL ON KNIFE
SUTHERLIN, March 23.—Jack Culver, III, is confined to his home on Third avenue as the result of a severe knife wound extending through the muscles and nerve center of the right leg above the knee. He was crawling beneath a truck at the Culver slaughter house west of town when he slipped and fell, his right leg coming in contact with a large knife which he was carrying.

The cut was over five inches long and quite deep and he lost considerable blood before he reached Dr. DeVore's office, where he was taken in a car. About a dozen stitches were taken to close the wound.

SALEM BOY KILLS PAL WITH RIFLE

SALEM, March 23.—(AP)—Ralph Schweigert, 14, was almost instantly killed here late yesterday by a bullet, city police said, from a 22-calibre rifle held by Rud Eperldin, 13, while on a Sunday bicycle ride. The killing, police officials said, was believed to have been accidental.

The victim of the accident, according to the story told police by young Eperldin, was riding his (Eperldin's) bicycle and, in an effort to stop him he "shot over his head." The bullet, instead, hit the rider in the head. He died before he could be taken to the hospital.

Police called to the scene declared they were informed both carried rifles to do some shooting.

The victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Schweigert of Salem while the other lad, held by juvenile officers for further questioning, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Eperldin, also of Salem. No charges had been filed.

He took great interest and was an untiring worker in all matters pertaining to the welfare and upbuilding of this community and it was sincerely regretted by all local people when he moved from Sutherlin. He had resided in Portland for the past four years.

He is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters, Mrs. B. S. Slack, of Sutherlin, Mrs. W. W. Watson, of Portland; Clut Bamber of Sutherlin, LaVerno Bamber of Portland.

GLENDALE HAS THREE FIRES IN ONE WEEK

GLENDALE, Ore., March 23.—Two small fires were reported here last week. On Thursday, at noon, the roof of the W. L. Nail house caught fire but was put out before serious damage was done. Friday morning the alarm was sounded for a small roof fire at the S. P. depot, which was not speedily extinguished.

With the burning of the boiler room at the Apex mill on the preceding Sunday, this brought the total to three fires for Glendale in less than a week.
