POET'S CORNER

MAN IS SPIRITUAL

By ALDEN HARNESSE
Before the far dim stars had spun
Through boundless and unending space:
Before the planet-circled sun
By cosmic force was held in place;
Before the cold white moon had birth;
Before that nature formed this earth;
Before a single orb had shone;
Creations of immortal Love
In perfect spirit-realms above
We lived when only God was known.

And in divine reality,
Beyond the mist of mystery,
Beyond what only seems to be,
As we advance and we allow
The knowledge of exacting laws
Of the supreme and primal cause
To guide us and become our own,
We live on planes of highest Mind,
We live in the Eternal Now,
We live where only God is known.

THE BLAZED TRAIL

G. M. LEEPER
When we blaze the trail
There are trees to notch
And twigs to bend—
Where sunshine and shadows blend,
To show where by
The trails we take
That lead beyond
Where the sun will shine and shadows break.

Use a careful hand
When a trail you make
And the kind of tools you take
For always remember some tools rebound,
And crooked trails laid for others
Oft 'tis ourselves they've found.

When blazing a trail
Shun no task or pain
For trials to us
Though loss they seem is oft times
gain,
Use all you have and leave it
there
It will return again to you—
In a thankful prayer
By weary traveler who found it
there.

We blaze the trail and notch the tree
Then travel on—
O'er the great divide
And do not see the weary travelers
That came that way
Or hear the tender words they say Or see them "turn" and come that way.

The trails we blaze
May some day lead
To hearts and souls that have a need,
And by the care we have given
there
May some day to heaven lead.

ANGLER VICTIM OF MYSTERIOUS DEATH

HOOD RIVER, Ore., June 8.—(AP)—Rudolph Imholz, 41, Portland angler, died early Sunday from injuries of mysterious origin while on a fishing expedition to isolated Badger lake on the east side of Mount Hood.

State Policeman Warren of Oregon City and Commander C. E. Anderson of Hood River said they believed his neck was broken. His face also was bruised. Pete Druse and Albert Hollett, who accompanied Imholz to the lake Saturday, said they had to return at night but Imholz was having good luck fishing and wished to remain, oficers related. At about 4 a. m. Sunday three other Portland anglers, en route to the same fishing grounds, heard calls of distress and found Imholz under a log. He died soon. Officers said he might have been weakened by exposure and have fallen. Search was made for his fishing paraphernalia.
