MYSTERY OF DEAD WOMAN UNSOLVED

KEILSO, June 29.—(AP)—Seeking to pierce the shroud of mystery surrounding the death of the blonde woman whose body was found in the Lewis river last Friday, Coroner Shirley R. Marsh today asked the Associated Press to broadcast her description in the hope her identity could be established. The woman was five feet six inches tall, and weighed 135 pounds. Her sandy blonde hair was bound in a long bob and showed traces of having been hennaed. Her eyes were blue, her teeth perfect. There was a large mole under her left armpit, and a half-inch scar on the left shin bone six inches above the ankle. The body was clad in a dark green crepe dress, light tan hose and white leather shoes trimmed in dark blue. The appeal was made after Dr. F. R. Menne, Portland pathologist, had confirmed the opinion of Dr. A. F. V. Davis, Cowlitz county physician, that death was not caused by drowning. Beyond this statement, however, Dr. Menne would not comment pending an analysis of the woman's stomach, which he will make upon his return to Portland this afternoon. Developments in the case continued to accumulate in a strange procession. It was learned today that rigor mortis had been noticeably lacking in the body as late as yesterday afternoon, more than 60 hours after death was presumed to have occurred. Certain poisons, medical authorities said, might result in this condition.

Seasonal Styles

On silk taffetas, silk satins and silk marocains. They come in opalescent, gold and silver, jewel effects, one color and multicolor. Tiny motifs spaced closely over the ground are newer than widely spaced motifs.

Mat Silk Sheers The continued absorption of such designers as Vionnet, Aline and Schiaparelli in the Greek dress theme, with folds, draping and scarfs, may carry heavy silk sheers and white over into the autumn mode. Among the important heavy sheer silks are new ones with mat surfaces, and remains with satin backs. Silk sheers are liked by Bruyere, Aline, Worth and others. Lachasse favors paisley silk chiffon for his Scotch tweed suit, even when it is accompanied by a leather hat and gloves.

New Silk Crepes and Marocains Crepe themes also influence afternoon dresses, bringing out front fullness in skirts, gathered bosom blouses, tunics with gathered folds, it calls for drapable silks such as heavy silk flat crepes, faille and grosgrain surfaces with satin backs, silk marocains, silk and wool ottomans, silk crepes with phantom stripes or tiny checkerboard patterns.

There is a new look to fall silk crepes. They are Jacquard or dobby patterns. These patterns are in all-over treatment, giving a stippled effect. There is importance from the novelty standpoint in new silk marocains with especially grainy, interrupted ribbing.

Flamme yarn crepes made of novelty silk thick-and-thin yarns are being shown for exclusive wear. Silk Jacquards The amusing animal and figure motifs which were so outstanding this spring in silk prints are being continued for fall in woven patterns. Tiny stippled effects are also important in Jacquards and dobbyes (Jacquard effects made with a dobby attachment). Large Persian patterns are shown in beautiful designs and colors.

The luster theme is carried to some of the new Jacquards—the satiny pattern giving the effect of embroidery. Fall Silk Colors Subtle colors, offshades with strong overtones, are the highlights of the silk color picture. Black retains its supremacy, usually accented with color, such as opaline rose or royal blue.

Brown is slated for considerable importance. The middle tones promise to be outstanding, such as chestnut, henna, mahogany and hudson seal brown. Yellow browns such as blond, luggage tau and tobacco brown are favored. There may be a swing to the red and wine tones of brown also, like Bordeaux brown and browawine on the textile color card.

Reds appear in variety. There are a number of Bordeaux tones, and also some of the bright reds, both clear red like lacquer, and red with yellow overtones. Wine with a brown cast also belongs in the red family in silks. Bruyere uses a copper red and Aline a true red.

Greens loom larger than they have for some seasons. Spruce green, a bluish tone, is very important. It may be the forerunner of a series of greenish blues. Yellow greens are important for accent, and may bring yellow tones into the fashion picture. Rosevienne likes three shades of dark green.

Blue tones are found in several high-style collections. Navy appears surprisingly often. Lanvin shows it in a crepe silk satin dinner dress which has a delicate fall aspect. Deep brilliant blues are important for evening. Blue tones are likewise frequently used as contrast. Slate blue appears occasionally in high-style lines for daytime. Sky blue is important for evening silks.

The purple influence is seen not only in actual purple tones, but overcasts blues and pinks, like Schiaparelli's opaline rose. Both Bruyere and Lanvin show purple, and Aline also shows corals.

Gray continues to appear in a light tone for evening. There are also some bluish grays. As a color for metals it is extremely attractive, and newer looking than gunmetal, which is still in favor. Schiaparelli still favors gray.

Gold is overcast by brown so that it becomes a tawny shade. It is particularly good for the strong contrast tones used in the costume. Color contrasts are frequent and unusual. Among the most interesting are yellow-green with wood violet, royal blue with black, chestnut with capucine, and spruce green with Chinese red. Piquet likes violet over rose. This color combination is also used by Norman Edwards in silk lame. He also combines wine satin with chartreuse silk, and wine with red and green. Lucile Paray combines purple and sky blue, and purple and red. LeLong likes old rose with wine for suits. Marcel Rochas combines Nile green and violet.

RED TICKET PLANS WARM CAMPAIGN

E. W. Browder, Kansas, is Presidential Nominee; Negro His Mate.

NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP)—The communist party, under the leadership of Earl W. Browder, its candidate for the presidency, started its election campaign today "to reach 10,000,000 voters" and "flood the country from one end to the other with red literature."

Browder was nominated by acclamation late yesterday at the final session of the party's ninth annual convention. James W. Ford, Harlem negro organizer, was named as his running mate.

Before the 20,000 wildly cheering party members that packed Madison Square garden, Browder voted its acceptance of the nomination by a bitter attack on the "greed" of both major parties.

The former Kansas, who as secretary of the party has taken a more and more prominent role in party affairs during the past two years, described the republican party and Governor Landon, of Kansas, as "the van-guard of fascism" to be stopped "at all costs."

The new deal he denounced as giving way more and more to "the forces of reaction" and said that workers must make themselves strong to force concessions from the democrats.

At the concluding session the party adopted an eight-point platform on which Browder and Ford will make their campaign.

Under the heading of "put America back to work" it promised a 30-hour week with a minimum annual wage, extension of WPA and PWA with special attention to low rental housing, abolition of child labor, a moratorium on and government refinancing at a low interest rate of farm loans, higher income, gift and inheritance taxes, nationalization of banking, curbing of the supreme court, and a death penalty for lynchers.

As announced by the campaign committee, special attention will be paid to radio and the movies. Plans are under way to have Browder speak on the radio at least once every week.

Just after he emptied the fuel into the stove there was a sharp report and Long was struck in the arm with a 24 caliber bullet. The bullet was removed at a hospital. Officers were unable to explain how the cartridge became mixed with the coal.

Wasted Bravery. NEW YORK, June 29.—(AP)—When a larger boy hesitated to climb down from an apartment house fire escape, his playmate, Francis Pterling, 5, said: "You have to brave watch me." Francis started the descent, slipped and fell five stories. He died instantly.
