Brilliant Colors Feature New Summer Fashions

Possibly the most notable feature of the new fashions which stylists have turned out for the 1936 season is that colors will be even more brilliant than in the somewhat gaudy creations of recent seasons. Novel fabrics have been used to give a further distinctive touch to the new ensembles. Kay Francis models a gown of unusual type, reflecting the Gibson girl era with its puffed sleeves and somewhat different neckline. Pat Patterson sports an ensemble which includes a white jersey frock with an unusual high neckline, a belt of navy blue kid and a topcoat of navy blue wool rajah striped in shaggy white. Another striking combination is that worn by Patricia Ellis, a frock of checked taffeta worn under a coat of white sheer wool.

Two More Stars Join Hollywood "Rebels"

Hollywood's growing list of stars on strike added to its roster Marlene Dietrich and Grace Moore after long-smouldering studio difficulties broke into the open. La Dietrich abandoned work on her new picture, protesting her part as a chambermaid was "unsuitable to her dignity", and was replaced by Margaret Sullavan, while Grace Moore declared she was through with pictures until Hollywood "learned to treat her as a human being". George Raft had previously walked out on a picture in which he was to have been co-starred with Carole Lombard, and James Cagney sued Warner Bros. because he was "compelled to make too many pictures." Cagney also demanded a salary increase.
