The Debutante

She's gay! She's pert!—and Beautiful! The world is her play ground and all men her admirers. In short, she is the debutante! Her few years rest lightly on her shoulders and her dancing feet are graceful to behold! Life opens up to her as flowers open up to the morning sun, because there is warmth to her emotions even though she clothe them in the accepted form of "What is being done in the very best of circles you know! My Dear!"

This young woman stands on the threshold of adventure. About her there is a star-light expectancy and that insatiable imp Romance is hiding around corners and peeking over balconies. Already she has heard "His" voice and is even now lending an attentive ear—but the difficulty seems to be that there are so many of him! And that is the Big Problem now, "Enie, Meenie, Moe—he loves me, he loves me not!" Oh well, here's to her—that gay, that pert, that irresistible debutante of today.
