POET'S CORNER

THE POSTMAN'S WHISTLE

By Stella Spencer
I miss the postman's whistle—
I listen for his welcome message—
I guess it's gone to stay.

The postman comes—he leaves the mail.
He puts it by the stair;
No racing, tearing down the hall
To be the first one there.

We used to make it quite a game,
For soon the dog got wise
And learned if he could make the gate
The paper'd be his prize.
Your games of chance and lottery
Will make your heart beat wild.
But I miss the postman's whistle
I heard when as a child.
