U. S. SWIMMERS LOSE AT OLYMPICS

BERLIN, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The United States annexed its third consecutive diving championship of the 11th Olympic games today, even though swimmers in four events without a soft-back, but uncovered no substitute for Eleanor Holm Jarrett and surrendered the women's 100-meter backstroke crown to Holland.

After Dorothy Poynton Hill, the 1932 champion, and Volna Dunn of Monrovia, Calif., had finished one-two in the women's platform diving championship, Dina Senff, Dutch champion, nosed out her compatriot, Rita Mastenbroek, and the American girls, Alice Hedges, of Uxbridge, Mass., and Edith Mottridge Social of Los Angeles. She thus assumed the women's backstroke title Mrs. Jarrett won for the United States four years ago at Los Angeles.

Mrs. Jarrett, a member of the current Olympic squad, was disqualified from the team for drinking and late hours. These two finals featured a day of competition marked otherwise by a new world record-breaking performance by Adolf Kiefer, of Chicago, yesterday, in the men's 100-meter backstroke semi-finals, and by the successful advance of America's entrants in the women's 400-meter free style trials, the men's 1,500-meter free style preliminaries and the men's 200-meter breast stroke trials.

Harvard's four with coxswain was eliminated from the Olympic regatta, finishing second behind the French quartet in the consolation race which saw the tri-color ensign gain a place in tomorrow's final. The winners were timed in 8:09.6 as compared to 8:06.5 for the American shell.

JOB SEEKERS GET OREGON WARNING

PORTLAND, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The Portland chamber of commerce today took steps to warn residents of the drought-stricken area and other portions of the mid-west against coming to Oregon in search of employment.

While the chamber modestly admits that Oregon is a paradise on earth, it is anxious to correct the erroneous impression that there are jobs of every kind available in the state. There are still many unemployed on the public employment rolls and except for seasonal jobs in the agricultural sectors, there is little work available.

R. H. Klipp, in charge of the land development department of the chamber, said that his department is being taxed to capacity by the steady influx of job-hunting mid-westerners, many of whom arrive with only a few dollars and are forced to apply for relief within a few days.

Investigation Will Check Legend That Marshal Ney, Aide of Napoleon, Escaped To America After Battle of Waterloo

By MAURICE MERRYFIELD (International Illustrated News Writer)

CHARLOTTE, N. C. — One of those romantic and legendary mysteries which has been an intriguing topic for the past century is likely to be solved within the next few weeks.

For years it has been a subject for debate as to the eventual fate of Michel Ney, French cooper's son who rose to eminence as a marshal in the service of Napoleon Bonaparte.

History records his end as having come when he faced a firing squad after Waterloo for having aided in the return of Napoleon from exile on the island of Elba. His execution is listed as having taken place in the Luxembourg gardens on Dec. 7, 1815, and his burial was supposed to have been in an unmarked grave in a Paris cemetery.

It was a month later that a French fencing master landed at Charleston, S. C., giving his name as Peter Stuart Ney. His background was mysterious and he chose to say nothing about his past.

Evidence Supports Theory Various incidents served to support the theory that this fencing teacher, however, was none other than the great marshal of France, the hero of Friedland and the retreat from Moscow, the man whom Napoleon termed "the bravest of the brave."

For several years after his arrival in South Carolina he wandered from place to place, teaching school and living in unobtrusive fashion. One definite incident which furthered the belief that he was Napoleon's aide was the discovery of several French histories in the library of Davidson college where he had written marginal notes commenting on accounts of Napoleon's career and correcting several errors concerning accounts of the "little Corsican's" battles.

And on his death bed in 1846 he announced his identity as Marshal Ney of France. It is also recorded that when news came of the death of Napoleon that Teacher Ney fainted and next day attempted to commit suicide. He was buried in the Presbyterian cemetery near Statesville.

Numerous articles and monographs have been written about the subject. Considerable research has been carried on by historians in an attempt to clear up the matter.

It now appears likely that the matter will be definitely settled. Plans are under way to dig up the grave of Peter Stuart Ney and make an exhaustive examination of the skeleton. Two chess board investigators to believe they can determine whether the grave is really the last resting place of France's great marshal. Marshal Ney was known to have a bullet-nicked ankle bone and had a silver tresser in his skull. Identification will depend upon whether a silver plate and a chipped ankle bone are found.

One of those present when the group of scientists opened the grave will be Dr. J. Edward Smoot, who was also on hand when Peter Ney was exhumed once before, in 1857. It is his theory that Marshal Ney escaped the firing squad composed of his old comrades in battle. He believes they loaded their guns with blanks and secretly huddled Ney aboard ship bound for America.
