Americanism.

THE best answer to anti-Americanism, states national commander of the American Legion, Ray Murphy, is real Americanism as exemplified by our various youth activities.

Commander Murphy could have gone much further. The best answer to all forms of anti-Americanism is real Americanism as exemplified by the leaders of the American Legion—national, state and local.

The term "Americanism" is variously understood. Some think the term means flag-waving, speech making and enthusiasm. Others regard the term as something which means a militant attitude with war spirit thinly veiled.

Nor does that imply a smug satisfaction with things as they are. There is no more progressive organization on earth than the Legion. But the Legion believes in the principles of government as set forth in the constitution of this country.

The Americanism as promulgated by the American Legion is not an idea of aggression, of power, or of territorial expansion. It wants no war. It envisages no conquest. This Americanism seeks only the right, for the people of this country, to live in peace and happiness and be permitted to work and earn and prosper in accordance with their ability and opportunity.

DROUGHT, of course, can't be prevented. Congress can't stop them by law. They just happen at more or less regular intervals. Crying about them does nobody any good.

It wasn't a good idea. Two drought years (1931 and 1935) have taught us that. Because of this artificially created scarcity, the effects of this year's drought on the country as a whole are more severe than they would otherwise have been.

Mrs. F. E. Walls, of Hereford, Texas, knows dreams can come true. She dreamed she broke her arm. When she awoke her left arm was doubled up in a peculiar manner and she was unable to move it. An X-ray disclosed it was broken.

One Word Led To Another

The automobile has released the summer vacationist from the tyranny of the summer boarding house. In the old days you stayed put for your two weeks' vacation whether you liked it or not.

In the old days you stayed put because you bought a railroad ticket between two points and it was not polite to point to any other place. The cost of the railroad fare was figured in the family budget and was just as important as quinine tablets. Transportation was costly and vital.

Summer boarders were practically in lock, like a drunken carpenter's saw on Saturday night.

They couldn't move from place to place like a flea on an iron deer. They were handcuffed to their first guess like a bride of Colonial days.

But thanks to the motor car and its shadow, the trailer, you can now bounce over the hill and play a deep left field for the next egg. You can go places and avoid things. All the ceremony required is a little water in the radiator, a white to the dog and a nod to the wife. Don't get your signals mixed. Away you go like a feather on the breeze, enjoying the panoramic vista and blowing smoke rings over hitchhikers' thumbs.

The motor car has released us from the bondage of insular aloofness and from the Oregon habit of inactivity. We move when we feel like it and go when we please. We have broken the shackles of front porch gossip.

RAMBLINGS OF THE NEWS-REVIEW MAN

BY PAUL JENKINS

THE Legion convention got off to a flying start last night, the big Gilmore Circus taking first place in public interest. I saw lots of kids there, and would have liked to have seen a lot more. It was a kid feature, but I noticed most of the good seats were filled by adults! It took me back to two days when I had to stand on the sidelines, while the grown-ups ate at the first table.

All the world loves a lover, it is said, and by the same token it loves a game sport. That little gal from Yoncalita who had all the trouble with her arched, wood the audience's heart, and what is more, earned its approval by the quality of her performance.

I saw an elephant in the rubber circus parade, but no jackass. Is it possible Gilmore has gone Republican?

The streets of Roseburg were lined with visitors last night, and so were the Streets of Paris. If you haven't attended that particular show, you'd better do so before it is too late. Hot? Why, when one of the girls which grace the stage in such profusion did her stuff, they had to call out the fire department.

The good old Oregonian, which knows more half truths about Roseburg than any other newspaper in the state, almost abandoned Louis Millard, commander of our local Legion post, in its front page story on the convention this morning. Oh, well—

I'm glad this isn't a big town; I've walked over it four times at night, remarked a delegate as he stood on the corner of Cass and Jackson, following out with his eyes the direction of the big point

The drum corps are limbering up, and in the parade tonight you will have the opportunity to what your interest for the great contest to be held on Friday field, Friday night. To me, that drum corps contest will be the highlight of the convention. There is something tremendously stirring about this magnificent spectacle, that always gets under my skin, and I'd nearly break a leg getting there, if I had to go to such an extreme.

The visiting school bands—and our own—we have already seen and appreciated; now I am waiting for the appearance of the Astoria High School band. What hitting music those skinned babies play! They ought to be here any time now.

ROOSTER'S DEMISE WILL SETTLE ROW

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 12.—(AP)—A neighborhood controversy apparently neared an end today, with a rooster of a neighbor being deprived of the rooster.

The case arose when the neighbor complained the rooster was noisy. After investigating, Patrolman Roberts reported the rooster's owners "decided they would put him (the rooster) in the pot. She also asked me to tell the man who reported it that he would not be invited to partake."
