HEARING REGAINED, CHILD FINDS FAULT

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Recovery of his hearing after a lapse of more than five years was a mitigated blessing to 6-year-old Carl Thelin, Jr., his mother disclosed today.

Annoyed by the human voice, her son declared the sound he found most pleasant was the soft noise of water lapping against a raft beneath a bridge over the Milwaukee river.

He used to play the piano when he could "hear" the music only through the vibrations in his finger tips. He stopped playing when he began hearing. "The radio," he said bluntly, "is an old jabber box."

Certain voices, especially high-pitched ones of children, annoy the round-eyed, curly-haired lad who after a tonsillectomy operation last July 24 heard his mother speak and then asked:

"Mother, that sound you made with your lips—is that what you told me a voice was?"

Piercickers, sparkling and flashing, delighted him before he could hear. Now their noise pains him.
