with the football allusion. Power "Abuse" Scored Landon criticized "abuse" of the power of congressional investigation, mentioning a recent inquiry of which "the thinly veiled purpose apparently was to discredit a political movement which the controlling party wished to crush." Some observers interpreted his remark as referring to the investigation of the petition movement sponsored by Dr. F. E. Townsend of Los Angeles, who has urged followers unable to vote for William Lendin, union party nominee, to cast their ballot for Landon. Jeered by Workers On his ride through Los Angeles in the afternoon, after an enthusiastic reception in Pasadena, the republican nominee stirred a ripple of handclaps and cries of welcome, but near the civic center loud boos were heard as the republican motorcade passed by. At a tunnel project, a number of WPA workmen uttered jeers.

In the entrance, the Kansas governor's speech brought frequent cheers and applause from the vast throng, drowning out the boos of scattered hecklers.

Landon contended the present administration, "when the crisis was over," instead of giving us "the extraordinary powers," asked for more, and "seemed obsessed with the idea that it had a mandate to direct and control American business, American agriculture, and American life."

Landon continued that the administration "resented any criticism" and "cracked the whip on those individuals who refused to be led like sheep."

Draws Laugh on F. R. "And when the supreme court declared its methods unconstitutional, the administration actually tried to bring the supreme court into disrepute... even the president joined in this undermining attack."

"The president predicted disaster if his plans were held unconstitutional. They were held unconstitutional. Now, he claims credit for the improvement that followed. He says he planned it that way."

Laughter echoed through the great stadium. Hammering home his attack on "abuse of the power of government," Landon said "all business men under the blue eagle, were faced with arbitrary enforcement of arbitrary interpretations of arbitrary rules—rules not made by congress but by some appointed subordinate sitting at a desk in Washington, and fumbling with the business of the country."

Turning to federal spending, the republican leader declared "the chief executive" has not hesitated to use the power given by "eight times as much discretionary spending power as was given to all of his predecessors together in 143 years of our history."

"There is unmistakable evidence," Landon asserted, "that these vast funds have been used to force congressmen and senators to support administration measures," "to prevent criticism by officials and representatives of local communities," and "to prevent freedom of choice at the polls."

states which have agreed to live together in a machine age. "When this administration came to Washington March 4, 1933, the machine of our national economy had completely broken down. For 12 years it had been neglected by those who believed that machines did not need tending. We tried to rebuild that machine, to modernize it and to turn on the purchasing power."

"It was the biggest peace time job ever attempted. It called for energy in a hundred directions at once, for imagination, for willingness to face facts."

"Because it was a modern machine it needed money in circulation to get it going and keep it going. Therefore, we had to obtain purchasing power for the farmer, work for the unemployed, loans to industry, safety and courage for banks."

"How much did we spend? Enough to get results—enough to be sure not to fail. There would have been no second chance if we had failed once."

Security Paramount "You and I are used to venturing capital to gain profits. And in these three and a half years our venture has succeeded."

"Prosperity measured in dollars is coming back. There are none among you to deny it. But there is a higher measure for prosperity—the measure of permanency—the measure of security."

"We seek not the prosperity of 1929 but the kind which will mean to every American family an assurance of safety of the home, safety of old age, safety of savings, safety of employment."

Speeding through Massachusetts by motor in a bid for 12 electoral votes, President Roosevelt paused by Fall river and told an outdoor crowd in South Park of administration efforts to bring back prosperity.

Huge Crowds Greet Him So dense was the throng and so uncontrolled, that newsmen in the party were unable to get within 100 yards of the platform. It was the president's second speech of the day.

The drive to Fall River from Providence was the whitest of the whole campaign. Instead of an orderly single line of traffic there were four lanes of speeding cars—about 150 of them. Brakes shrieked as drivers weaved in and out, crossing from lane to lane in an effort to "get up front" near the president.

In Fall River, men and women and children pressed up to the rim of the official cars and some climbed on. A number of people were hurt, and children, terrified or injured in the crush, were crying loudly at different points along the way.

A huge bouquet of red roses was handed to the president as his car slowed down on the outskirts of New Bedford and he alternately waved it and his felt hat at the people standing along the curb overlooking into the streets and massed on front porches.

NATIONS UNITE IN PLANS TO SAVE NON-COMBATANTS (By the Associated Press) Great Britain, France, and 13 Latin-American nations moved in diplomatic concert today to save thousands of Spanish non-combatants from death in besieged Madrid.

In two hemispheres, there were these humanitarian efforts as fascist armies closed in on the Spanish capital from the south and west.

1. Great Britain ordered its navy to stand by for a "mission of mercy" to rescue hostages held by both sides in the war. Estimating there were 8,000 of these hostages in Madrid alone, the British government pressed both the Madrid government and the fascist authorities for the exchange and evacuation of the women prisoners, in particular.

2. Carlos Saavedra Laman, the Argentine foreign minister, conferred secretly with Premier Leon Blum of France in Paris on the possibility of resolute endurances of non-combatants by plane, while refugees told of spreading Spanish anarchy and violent reaction to it.

3. Thirteen Latin American states, from Mexico to Argentina, decided to ask Madrid in simultaneous notes to recognize the principle of asylum to save hundreds of flightless now refused in Latin-American legation in the Spanish capital.

Meanwhile soviet Russia was represented by informed Moscow sources as determined to force a policy of aid to the fetidly Madrid government, determined that only the immediate despatch of millions can save Madrid.

ITALY, GERMANY JOIN FOR RECOGNITION OF REBELS ROME, Oct. 21.—(AP)—Italy and Germany will recognize the insurgent government of Spain at once immediately after the fascist armies occupy Madrid, well-informed sources declared today.

Agreement on either was said to be one of four important issues on which the nations reached accord after Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's first conference with Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Germany's foreign minister, in Berlin.

The other three were reported as their stands on the league of nations, the Locarno treaty and central Europe.

Authoritative sources said Germany had agreed not to return to Geneva until the league of nations was reorganized on lines of the Italian plan for a directoire of the great powers, and until article 16 of the league covenant, on sanctions, was stricken.

Germany and Italy, the report said, want a new League treaty based on the old pact and both reject the British idea of splitting it into two treaties—one for northern Europe and one for the south.

Rome and Berlin were reported to have agreed to divide the Danubian region into zones of commercial influence.

In Madrid, every available man, woman and youth was mustered for defense of the siege-threatened capital. Authorities rushed work on interior defenses while shovels squeaked hurriedly dug trench lines around the outskirts.

appeal to the veterans administration for a modification of the order. Resolutions protesting the conversion and urging additional facilities to handle N-P cases have previously been adopted by the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Spanish War Veterans and other groups of ex-service men in Oregon, Fisher pointed out.

Vets Oppose Conversion. He reports he has already been contacted by leaders of veterans organizations in the southern part of the state relative to the proposed conversion. The opinion of these veterans, he states, is that the removal of hospital and domiciliary facilities from Roseburg will seriously affect the veterans of the area, particularly as there are no domiciliary facilities elsewhere available in Oregon, except for a possible limited number of beds at the veterans hospital in Portland.

The Roseburg hospital he points out, has also served hundreds of emergency cases, particularly in acute illness and accident, and the elimination of such facilities is feared would cost lives from lack of the prompt attention now available.

If appeals of the governor and United States senators are not sufficient to secure the desired modification of the order, Fisher states that he plans to lay the matter before the legislature at its forthcoming session to secure further support.

Need Still Exists "The state of Oregon," Fisher said today, "has for many years recognized its obligation to provide domiciliary and hospital care for its veterans. A state soldiers home at Roseburg was provided to meet such need and was made a part of the present federal institution. It would therefore seem to me that the state has a moral obligation to protect to the veterans administration the elimination of such services in this part of the state, particularly in view of the fact that use of the existing facilities, since the time they were established here, has fully demonstrated the need that exists."

"While Roseburg will benefit financially by the conversion, through increased population and personnel," Fisher said, "the veterans with whom I have discussed this matter feel that if facilities for neuropsychiatric cases are needed they should be provided in addition to those now maintained."

CHILDREN HURT IN CRUSH TO SEE F. R. FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 21.—(AP)—Three children suffered fractured arms, and scores were jostled here today when a huge crowd greeting President Roosevelt at South Park broke through ropes as the presidential party arrived.

The three children, each 12 years old, and treated at a hospital, were: William Ferreira, Estrella Pacheco, and Eugene Michanski, Jr.

The crowd was held back by ropes before the president's party arrived, but as the motored appeared hundreds broke through, jostling and bruising scores. A section of a temporary grandstand collapsed, injuring others.

Little Estrella was hurt in the collapse of the stand. Young Ferreira fell from a roof of a park building, and the Michanski boy was pushed or fell from a tree.

Read carefully every word of Mrs. Tuel's remarkable testimonial. Her address is 2300 Brooks St., Salem, Ore., in which city she has lived for many years, and is widely known throughout Oregon.

Food Lay in Stomach Like Rock After Her Meals "For years I was in an awful condition," said Mrs. Tuel. "After meals I would bloat up with gas and it would feel like my food had turned into a rock inside of me. I was simply in misery. Was also a victim of sluggish kidneys, in fact, they got me up four or five times EVERY NIGHT, which broke up my sleep and rest COMPLETELY."

"I tried many medicines, but will frankly say that nothing did me any good, and I was in despair. Then, recently, I began to hear about Van-Tage and what it was doing for so many people. So I got it and started taking it. And I will say that it was JUST WHAT I NEEDED. It took hold of my trouble at once. It worked the awful gas and bloating and hard, rocky feeling from my stomach and now I can eat and not suffer afterward; and it stoned my kidney sluggishness and I can go to bed and sleep all night without having to get up. This medicine did a thousand times more for me than they said it would. I never saw anything like it, and can't praise it enough after the way it helped me!"
