POET'S CORNER

"NATURE'S HAND"

I sought from nature
Just to learn,
Asking nothing
In return,
But nature gave me
Of her best,
Though I had only
Asked to learn.

I sought from nature
Just to live,
Having naught whereof
To give,
But nature gave me
All to hold,
Though I had only
Asked to live.

I sought from nature
Not to die,
Having no hope,
To guide me by,
But nature's hand
With life and hope
Came forth to give
Though I had only
Asked to live.

I sought from nature
My soul to inspire,
But my life held
No light
Or smoldering fire,
But nature gave me
All her flame—
Though I had only asked
A tiny flame.

I sought from nature
The life of a "tree,"
But forests grew stern
And cold to me,
Then nature answered
From the forest shade
And told me why
The trees were made.

I sought from nature
That I might rest,
Where forests sway
Their leafy crest,
But nature claimed me
As her guest—
Though I had only
Asked to rest.

Nature turned
From her way
Where she walked
Through God's own
Land,
To bring to one
So unworthy as I
The soft touch
Of her hand.
