Daily Devotions DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

All great and good teachers, and Jesus as much as any of them, looked upon courage as one of the primary virtues. No pagan teacher thought more highly of it than He did, and surely no man ever illustrated it as fully as He did. One of the noblest sentences in the story of any man's life is this one: "When the days were well-nigh come that He should be received up He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem." He might have turned aside and none would have blamed Him, but He showed a courage born of unswerving faith in God, and there is no courage like that. May we, too, our Father know something of the heroism of our Master that will keep us steadfast in the face of stern duty. Amen.
