

RESETTLEMENT PLANNING STARTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Resettlement administration plans to help farmers at the "bottom of the heap" took shape simultaneously today in legislative and administrative quarters.

Saying there is a vast difference between "the top one-third" and the "bottom one-third of the farmers," Secretary Wallace declared in a radio address (the farm and home hour) the agency would concentrate on a program of supervised loans for the smallest farmers.

He said last year resettlement made such loans to 260,000 farm families and termed that its "most important" activity.

Senator Pope (D, Idaho), head of a congressional relief bloc, said the RA had set aside "a substantial sum" to provide for 10,000 families going into the northwest from the dust bowl states.

The bloc, including congressmen from six western states, wants an increase in proposed relief appropriations for the next five months. Pope said the resettlement allotment will "meet immediate needs."

The Idaho senator reported four of his colleagues and four representatives will ask the house appropriations committee "probably Wednesday" for "adequate relief funds." He added he has been assured by the administration that needy families in Idaho, Oregon and Washington, who have fled from the drought area, will get cash grants.
