POET'S CORNER

YOUTH By Lilith Sanford, Tescumseh, Okla.

Adrift on the sea of complexity, My banner of youth flung high, Afloat, my brain all perplexity, But my eyes turned to the sky.

Lost in a night of dark shadows, Struggling to force me a pass, Wondering and probing at obstacles, Thinking this darkness can't last.

Oh night, hold me yet in your bosom, Strengthen me still for the falls, There they go down or pass on, Where the wild wind blusteringly calls.

Oh what can I do? I question, To chaos around my frail craft, With naught but youth as my rud-dor,

At which the stern ages laugh, Oh still I must steer toward the sunset, No definite marked goal do I see, No guide to show me the pitfalls, Naught by my youthcraft and me.

ANSWER TO "YOUTH" By J. Margaret Crute Ashcraft, Roseburg, Ore.

You need not drift on the sea of doubt, With youth's banner alone, flung high, Nor need the brain be all perplexed, When the eyes turn toward the sky.

Why should you be lost in dark shadows, Struggling alone with the night? When there is One waiting to show you

The way to the shore and the light, Instead of youth, place God at the helm, Then out of chaos comes peace, And you will sail on to a glorious end,

And the blustering storms will cease, Oh youth, drift not toward the sunset, With no definite object in view, Let God be your guide and heaven your goal, And all things will come to you.
