DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

In the apostolic days the church was a light in the darkness; it was a standing rebuke to the spirit of corruption in the affairs of men. It should be so today. The church is in the world but not of it, and it cannot resist the temptation peculiar to the world, we have no right to encumber its surface any longer. It is imperative that within the church we should resort to practices which we sharply condemn when they occur in other circles. We are perhaps too polite to speak out. The church is a spiritual body, not a political organization and nothing which would interfere with its spiritual vitality should be tolerated. To be true to the Church of God is not an honor to be coveted but a responsibility which we must humbly and dutifully accept. Amen.
