PARIS FASHIONS OF INTEREST TO MILADY

PARIS, March 24.—(AP)—Warmer colors, wider skirts—longer veils, tassels, ribbons fluttering in the breeze—these mark the 1937 Easter fashions decreed by Paris style arbiters.

Coats, belted at the waist and deep-lashed at the sides, were open to show dresses in bright patterned prints or warm toned wools or silks, long coats in swagger style provide a swinging movement all their own, falling free from a single button-fastening at the neck. Suits with wider skirts than last year's, and short box or bolero jackets, spell youth and take the right-of-way for Easter parades. Their lustrous blouses are fronted with ruffles of fluffy chiffon or fluted organdie. Their gilets strike a festive note in ottoman or cross-grain silks, chalk white or faintly shawl pink.

Flowers dot lapels in tight bunches of small blooms that take the lead this year. Veils flutter longer and fuller, drooping to the shoulders from Panama straw salonnors, or eastern bonnets shaped up off the face to let flowers nestle under the brim against the forehead. More and cross-grain ribbons flutter from the backs of hats and the necks and waists of frocks. Color mounts ac-high in Easter's accent. Multi-color embroideries oocent dark frocks and ensembles. White and vivid pipings blight light staid coats and suits. Contrasting flat braids follow along edges or do entwined designs on jacket fronts. Silk tassels play up print collars.
