INSURGENT PLOTTERS IN MADRID ARE ROUNDED UP MADRID, April 17.—(AP)—Police announced today more than a score of insurgent sympathizers, including a number of priests in disguise, were arrested in two raids on "fascist" headquarters.

Officials said they discovered the "biggest and best organized" insurgent espionage ring since the outbreak of the civil war, and had seized valuable secret documents. Insurgent agents operating within the city, they said, planned an attempt to sway Madrid's defense forces to turn against the city and operate an "underground railroad" to deliver insurgent sympathizers behind General Franco's lines.

WHY TRADE ANYWHERE ELSE?

At last we have completed arrangements for operating the Farm Bureau Exchange on a cooperative profit sharing basis and we now invite every Douglas County farmer to share with us in the profits of our 1937 business.

This is the most liberal offer I have ever known to be made. We offer you a full share in the profits or savings of a well known, firmly established business; a business which is in excellent shape; a business with proven policies and management; a business governed by a board of directors who are all well and favorably known in the county and state; a business handling the highest grade merchandise obtainable, and rendering the most complete supply service to farmers of any operated in the state of Oregon; and we don't ask you to pay, or promise to pay, one red cent for this privilege. You need sign no notes, assume no liabilities, nor join any organization.

All we ask of you is your patronage and your agreement to let the first $50.00 of your patronage or other dividends stay in the business to provide more and better services for you. Can you beat such an offer? Can you let such an offer pass? Can you even find anything to compare with such an offer? When most contractors start they have a hard battle. It is necessary for members to dig up hard cash, to sign notes, and to go through all kinds of hard and costly experience. We have already done all that. We didn't have quite as hard a time as you are having in Spain, where, according to a clipping from the Co-op League News Service General Franco is closing all co-ops in captured territory and standing the officials before firing squads, but we had plenty tough going. Competitors threatened to boycott manufacturers who sold to us. Manufacturers refused to sell to us, bank examiners criticized the banks for lending to us. Trade associations frowned upon us. The landlord kept raising our rent, and when we tried to buy a building the owner told us we had champagne ideas on a beer bank account.

But now, as Kipling's Tommy Atkins sang: "All that's left behind us, long ago and far away."

We're sitting on top of the world. Throwing rocks at the rain-bows, and we invite you to join us and heave a pebble or two yourself.

No fooling, folks, this is one honest to goodness offer with no hole in the doughnut. A dream without a single alarm clock in it. We offer you goods of equal or superior quality at competitive prices, backed by the best service we know how to give. Reasonable credit accommodations where justified, a complete line of farm supplies from the fence around the back pasture to the electric light on the front porch, and from the basement drain pipe to the shingle nails in the roof.

We offer you the use of our tractors and implements to till them, need to plant them, need to harvest the crops, a place to clean, grind, store or sell the cream, and the modern conveniences, such as running water, plumbing, electric lights, labor saving electric appliances and equipment which you are hoping and planning to buy when you plant the crops. Step and ask yourself if any other business in Douglas County offers you even one half as complete a service and then remember, the profits will belong to you, in exact proportion to the amount of your purchases.

I was explaining all this to a fellow the other day and he said: "You must be pretty hard up for business to offer all that."

Please, folks, don't make me laugh. I've got a sore lip. We had a darned good year's business in 1936 and we're having a lot better one in 1937.

We have been working and planning sixteen years to be able to make this offer, and we are so proud and glad to be able to make it at last we feel like flaming our arms and crowing like a rooster. No, friends, there are no worms in the grub we are offering you. We need you and you need us. Climb on and ride. We're going up.

Criza, who officials charged was the leader of the organization. The priests, they said, were posing as civilians.

Government infantry, artillery, tanks and planes were hurled against the Teruel salient with which Gen. Franco had hoped to sever the "life line" between Valencia and the government ally, Catalonia.

In a surprise maneuver, the Madrid-Valencia forces were reported to have made a long advance intended to encircle Teruel about 150 miles east of here, and force Franco's warriors to retreat into the Aragon provinces.

At Huesca, the northeasternmost Aragon provincial capital, on the other flank of Franco's far-flung army, Catalan troops pressed attempts to ring the city and force its capitulation after eight months of siege.

Rebel Aid Frustrated Meanwhile the gunners of General Miaja, the government commander on the Madrid-central front maintained a heavy shelling on insurgent positions on Garabitas and Aguila hills in the Casa de Campo sector, adjoining University City, where 3,000 insurgents are trapped on the capital's western fringe. Devastating fire turned back all attempts to get food and ammunition in to the beleaguered University City garrison.

In the hammer-like drive on the insurgents' Teruel spearhead toward the east coast, the government militiamen swept through three villages and seized Gordo hill six miles north of Teruel.

Backing up the drive, government planes bombed Elguenza and engaged in combat with a defense squadron. One insurgent ship was reported shot down.

Here in the beleaguered capital, Madrilenos had a new worry—stray rifle bullets dropping into the city from the fighting on the western front.

Foes Have Peace Spell From the El Pardo front came the story of one of war's paradoxes. Insurgent and government soldiers halted their firing to allow squads from both sides to enter no man's land to gather their dead.

The opposing soldiers met over their gruesome task, chatted, and puffed cigarettes fraternally. Then they gathered up the bodies, returned to their trenches and the fighting started all over again.

Steel Scissors for Tree Chopping

A bite that means more than the bark is provided by the "tree-scissors" invented by Kirk Knight, 27, of Bartlett, Tex., to clear wooded land in a hurry. Resembling a big beetle, top photo, the machine is mounted on the front of a tractor. The big steel jaws which Knight is pointing out bite through the wood when they make contact with a tree, as in lower photo. The cross-bar above the blades push the tree forward. Knight says he can average two trees a minute and estimates the machine will do the work of 200 woodchoppers. The largest tree it has cut was 22 inches wide.
