WHEN one of Oregon's leading potato growers (a man who now has few financial worries) first came to the Klamath country, he didn't have a cent.

But he DID have some credit. Due to the fact that he had always paid his bills, so he managed to rent a piece of land (it wasn't too good) and borrowed $2,000. With this $2,000 he succeeded in "making a crop," as they say in the South, and living until harvest time.

BUT by the time the crop was harvested, the bottom had fallen out of the market and his TOTAL SALES amounted to just TWO DOLLARS! Potatoes were a drug on the market that year.

WELL, a lot of us would have folded up and quit. But this man had COURAGE. Instead of folding up and quitting (and letting his creditors whistle for their money) he squared his (Continued on page 4)

BULLET KILLED CAFE MANAGER AT CAMPVIEW

Coroner Holds W.H. Young Suicide After Story of Family Quarrel and Reported Threat.

The body of Waldo H. Young, 41, manager of the Campview cafe, located a short distance north of Roseburg, was found in a littered booth of the cafe this morning. Death, Coroner H. C. Stearns reported, was apparently self-inflicted. An automatic pistol, which Young was reported to have carried since a recent lull in his place of business, was found under the body.

Coroner Stearns said he was told by Mrs. Young that her husband had threatened suicide about midnight last night, following a quarrel during which she told him that, with their six-month-old son, she would return to relatives in Los Angeles. She said, the coroner reported, that Young had been drinking heavily and was in a despondent mood.

Final Acts Recounted An investigation conducted this morning by Coroner Stearns, Sheriff Percy Webb and deputies and Corporal Paul Parsons of the state police indicated that Young closed the cafe at 10:30 p. m. and went to the account book before taking his life.

Money found in his pocket corresponded exactly with his report on the day's receipts as entered in the cash book. He had apparently then seated himself in a booth, the table of which was littered with cigarette stubs, and a partially emptied glass of beer. The body was still slumped in the seat when found today. A shot in the head had caused instant death, officers said, the pistol and ejected shell being found under the seat on which the body rested.

Suicide Threat Told Officers were told by Mrs. Young, they reported, that he had been drinking heavily yesterday. She said that she had taken care of the business earlier in the evening, and that she then went to a nearby home where her husband had been visiting for several days.
