

"HYPNOTIC" SALTS HAILED BY MEDICOS

New Infantile Paralysis
Remedy Found Success in Cases Treated.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 7. (AP)—"Hypnotic" salts flowing through the veins of 57 infantile paralysis victims were said today to have brought every one of them through the disease alive and 20 without any trace of paralysis.

This new treatment for infantile paralysis, first announced two years ago, and since then improved and simplified, was exhibited to the American Medical Association here by George M. Ketan, M. D. of Syracuse university and Syracuse Memorial hospital.

The "hypnotic" solutions are common salt of less concentration than the normal salt in the blood. In infantile paralysis, large quantities are flushed through the veins continuously for five hours at a time. They are put in with a hyperthermic. The volume is 10 cubic centimeters of liquid per hour per pound of weight.

The result is relief of the nerve inflammation which causes the damage and death. During the salt injection, small amounts of spinal fluid are periodically extracted as a precaution against high pressure building up in the brain.

All 57 cases were severe. Ten were the breathing paralysis type which usually has a death rate of 50 per cent. Five were the "ascending" kind which copy books say is usually 100 per cent fatal. All were from Louisville, Birmingham and Syracuse.

Dr. Ketan said it appears the "iron lung" will not be needed with this method. The lung was used on the first two of the ten respiratory cases, he said, before the new treatment had been well established.

One Example Cited
He described a case of a child with one side of the diaphragm and intercostal muscles on the same side completely out of action. The child was breathing only with the other lung when the salt treatment began. In half an hour, breathing movement was visible in the apparently paralyzed lung.

There were six cases of throat paralysis. Average mortality of such cases is 40 to 50 per cent. The six were not only saved but recovered far quicker. With throat paralysis, Dr. Ketan said, ordinary patients are not able to swallow liquids until an average of 15 days after the onset.

But the salt-treated patients were able to drink fluids after the first treatment. This happened although their throats had been paralyzed from a few hours to three days. Several, he said, have eaten solid food after the third salt treatment. There was 48 hours after complete throat paralysis.

He reported some strength returns almost immediately to weakened muscles.

Of the 57 cases, 23 began the salt treatment before muscular paralysis had appeared. Twenty of these after recovery were completely free from any paralysis whatever.
