SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER IMPORTANT

Record for Each Employee Must Be Complete, Says Official Advice.

Southwestern Oregon employers were today informed by Laurence E. Fischer, acting manager of the social security board in Eugene, that they must have a record of the social security number of each employee under 65 years of age to whom they have paid wages or salaries since January 1, 1937.

Citing treasury regulations, Mr. Fischer emphasized that employers must list the account number of each employee on information reports to be filed with the collector of internal revenue in July. These reports will cover wage and salary payments to employees between January 1 and June 30 of this year.

An employer who lacks the account number of an employee who has left his employment since January 1, should file an application form (SS-5) with the local post office providing sufficient supporting information to establish the employee's identity beyond reasonable doubt. This application will be checked against the post office files to determine whether an account number has already been issued.

The name of a former employee is not sufficient information to identify the employee in question and may result in mistakes which would deprive the proper employee of obtaining credit for wages earned. Mr. Fischer said.

Employees were also urged by Mr. Fischer to report their social security account numbers to employers promptly if they have not already done so. This, it was said, also applies to employees who have worked for more than one employer since last January 1.

If an employee believes that an employer for whom he worked since the first of the year does not have his social security account number, he should get in touch with the employer and give him the information, Mr. Fischer said.

Account numbers will be issued to workers through the post offices until June 30. Thereafter, application forms can be obtained at local post offices and at social security board offices, but the assignment of account numbers will be made by the board's field offices.

IMPROVED DEMAND FOR PRUNES LOOMS

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—The agriculture department predicts demand for American prunes in European markets should be much improved during the 1937-38 export season.

It based this forecast on a cable report from its Paris office that the European production of dried prunes this year would be small.

Present prospects were said to indicate a crop of 60 per cent smaller than the 60,000 short tons produced in Europe last year.
