No Political Surrender
Rejection of the commonwealth
federation affiliation was in line with the recommendation of Ben T. Osborne, federation secretary, that organized labor should not
"surrender its political functions"
to the new group.
John Bullock, a member of the commonwealth board of directors, issued a statement expressing grafilication that "delegates representing a clear majority of the membership of organized labor in Oregon" voted for the endorsement. Observers interpreted the remark as referring to delegates of the maritime and woodworking unions.

Both Sides Enjoined

In Canton, Judge George N. Graham of common pleas court granted an infunction restraining both non-strikers and striffers from carrying weapons and prohibiting interference with ingress and ogress at Remablic plants.

Two hundred Ohio national guardsmen in Canton were ready to help enforce the infunction as soon as they received a call from civil authorities. A picket-limiting injunction granted in Warren is being enforced by the military.

Miners pickets peacefully strode up and down at entrances to Bethlehem Steel's Cambria works in Johnstown, Pa.

Meanwhile, son-strikers, and company officials manged re-opening plans at conferences in the strike-affected cities.

John Owons, Obio C. I. O leader and director of the steel strike in Ohio, said of the biasts:

"That's an old trick practiced by strike-breaking agencies in industrial strife from the beginning of time. It always is a strange thing that these happenings which terrify people and convince them of the necessity of having police pretection result in no conviction of strikers."

Owens sent word along the scattered picket lines ordering strikers to hold their ground and refuse to return. Non-striking employes struggled through several gates of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co, plants to recondition equipment.
