Losses From June Rain Spell Eyed Fruit Crops Hard Hit, But Wheat and Livestock Receive Benefit. PORTLAND, June 25.—(AP)—Clear skies the past few days may have wiped away the moisture of which much was said and written the past three weeks for many Oregon residents, but growers and farmers, both those who suffered crop losses and those who remember the down-pour, long will remember June of 1937 when rain fell continuously for 16 days. Those whose fruits and crops were damaged started taking toll of the losses, small wheat growers expressed pleasure and good prospects along with livestock men, but in the cities residents already have started worrying about sprinkling lawns again. The unprecedented season's rains, which the Portland weather bureau announced covered the entire state, crashing records in virtually every section, proved more than twice as heavy as the June average. Two years ago many residents of the dust bowl regions of the middle west, left their drought-crusted farms and started trekking to the Pacific coast. With such news from out the west those who turned left behind perhaps may turn envious eyes toward the green hills and valleys where their former neighbors now reside. Precipitation Marks. Rain fell continuously from June 5 to June 23 inclusive, the weather bureau reported. In one week it averaged from 2 inches in the dry Lake county to 9.40 inches along the southwestern Oregon coast. In some places in normally dry central Oregon as much as 3 inches was recorded during the last of the three weeks. At Port Orford in 49 hours a half foot of water was emptied by the heavy clouds. In Portland and the Willamette valley, where the normal June rainfall is around one and a half inches, nearly four inches of moisture was recorded during the 18-day period. While various sections reported damage to fruit and various other crops, there have been no reports of flood conditions. Fishermen may have had luck this week-end because of swollen and roily streams, but even the fish will bite again with fair weather the next couple of days, the state game commission reported. Some Cherries Salvaged. Estimates of cherry losses in the mid-Columbia Oregon ran as high as 40 per cent of the crop, but with the hope much can be salvaged for barrelling. To offset this, cherry growers there an even better outlook than last year when the fruit was damaged by frosts. Wheat farmers welcomed the moisture and other small grains were materially benefited. Winter wheat was somewhat damaged and corn was delayed. In the haying sections there was a loss, and pear blight in the fruit sections was advanced. Strawberry crops were hard hit, resulting at many places in twice the price on the market. Tomatoes suffered somewhat from the rain. The Willamette valley district reported a 4000-ton loss in cherries. Among the bright spots are the pastures and unirrigated meadows which leaped ahead, while livestock made steaming gains. The weatherman says, however, that summer has arrived at last. BIBLE INSTITUTE PLANS ANNOUNCED LOOKINGGLASS, June 25.—Under the direction of D. D. Hamblin, representative of the American Bible School union and missionary assigned to this district, a Bible institute will be held in Lookingglass July 8, 9, 10 and 11. The institute will be held in Lookingglass, a part of the church building and will be utilized in housing the visitors and providing dining hall and class rooms. Dr. Faucett, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Roseburg, will conduct one of the classes and other leaders will be announced later. Dr. Lewis of Central Point Bible school will have charge of the evangelistic meetings each evening to which the general public is invited. Persons of high school age and older are invited to register for the institute, which is planned to provide an intensive period of Bible study. Chaperons will be provided for the dormitories and every effort made to insure a profitable and enjoyable time for all. A committee consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Marsh, Mrs. Echo Heurd, Mrs. Mount and A. Larsen has been appointed to arrange for provisions and dining hall facilities.
