COURT BILL FOES PLAN COMPROMISE

When on the floor. Wheeler told reporters. Finally there was no doubt his group had enough votes to recommend the present bill. He served notice they would agree to no compromise which would increase the size of the supreme court. The disposition leader said his group was willing to work out some reform legislation for the lower courts, to speed action, and present direct appeals to the supreme court in constitutional cases, but was opposed to "revolving judges" or the proposed practice of recommending their assignment. Wheeler's statement coming just after his conference with Garner lent weight to reports from opponents earlier in the day that the administration was willing to abandon the supreme court part of the disputed court bill. Spokesmen for the administration were still, however, keeping their lips tightly closed and would not hint at what kind of compromise they were willing to take. Opposition View Stated. Garner refused to discuss his conference with Wheeler but Wheeler dictated to newspapermen who crowded into his office the following statement: "We have got the votes to recommend the present bill to the judiciary committee. "We will not stand for any legislation which in any way, shape or form adds any new members to the supreme court. "Our group is willing to work out some legislation for reforms. The difference between the position of the opponents of the bill and some advisors of the president is that we are for reform and they want control of the court. "We want to speed up the decisions of the lower courts. We want to correct the abuses in the lower courts injunction matters. We want to speed up appeals to the supreme court on constitutional matters and we would like to see something worked out to prevent racketeering in recoveries. "I am going to confer with our group and see if we can work out a proposal along these lines and submit it to the administration for their consideration. "Procter Plan Opposed. "We are opposed to the procter provision of their bill because while it might result in some good, the possibility of abuses are so great that we would not stand for it. "We are opposed to having 'revolving judges,' but we are willing to provide whatever number of additional judges the administration may want on the basis of need. "We are unwilling to base any increase in the number of lower court judges on age or political considerations. "But wherever the attorney general says the courts are behind in their work and need new judges, we are willing to give them to him, regardless of whether the number is 20 or 50."

For the first time, Wheeler announced that opponents would not accept a bill such as that now pending before the senate with present sitting judges excluded. That suggestion has been frequently discussed as a possible compromise, and Wheeler himself once hinted that it might prove the basis for a compromise. "Reprisals" Banned. After outlining what the opponents would be willing to do, Wheeler said "if we can get an agreement on this we can pass it at this session of congress. "That any compromise," he added, "has got to be with the understanding that there will be no reprisals against senators who have opposed the (amended) bill and with the understanding that it will not be amended in the house to add new justices to the supreme court. "Senator McCarran (D, Nev.), a determined foe of the bill, predicted that the senate, when it reconvenes tomorrow, will vote to recommit the court plan. "I have no doubt in the world it will be put to everlasting sleep, and that goes for both the original bill and the substitute," he said.

DAN POLING TO BE O. S. C. ASST. DEAN

CORVALLIS, July 20 (AP)—Dan W. Poling, superintendent of schools at Myrtle Creek, succeeded Percy Lacey today as assistant to the dean of both at Oregon State college.

Lacey will devote full time to managing inter-collegiate activities and the educational activities board.

Poling, whose selection is subject to confirmation by the board of higher education, received his degree from the school of commerce in 1925. He headed the school system at Maupin before going to Myrtle Creek.

He will work with the living groups and supervise class organization. He will also teach part time in the political science department, a branch of the college headed by Dr. U. G. Durbach, dean of men.

Poling is a cousin of Dr. Dan Poling, Philadelphia, noted leader in temperance and Christian Endeavor work, and the son of Dr. Noyman in the Peiping area.

In a general attack against Wanchingsten, just north of the marble bridge of Marco Polo, west of Peiping, yesterday, Japanese troops destroyed the Chinese barracks there with an artillery bombardment. The Japanese claimed they had also destroyed the Chinese.

In answer to reports of heavy loss of civilian lives, Japanese asserted they had "warned" the populace to evacuate the area.

The "more deadly" attack against the Chinese troops was mentioned by Hsiao General Toshihiro Kawabe, "unless they reflect on their action." The general's statement was taken as a clear indication that Japan was seeking by increasingly serious threats to force Chinese capitulation to demands for uninterrupted domination of the area.

COURT RULING ASSAILED BY DIRECTOR OF NLR BOARD

NEW YORK, July 21 (AP)—The ruling of Vice Chancellor Berry that labor contracts providing for closed shops were "illegal and unenforceable" was attacked today by Mrs. Elinore M. Herriek, regional director of the national labor relations board.

"There are plenty of court decisions in many states upholding the legality of the closed shop," said Mrs. Herriek.

She asserted that section 8, subdivision 3 of the Wagner labor relations act includes a statement that "nothing in this act... shall preclude an employer from making an agreement with a labor organization... to require a condition of employment membership therein."

NORTH CHINA ARMY FORCED TO RETREAT

The Japanese brigade commander southwest of Peiping threatened "another and more deadly blow" against the Chinese.

Similar steps to protect their nationals were taken by British, French and Italian authorities after reports were received that two American women had been abducted and held by Japanese soldiers on guard before the embassy in Peiping.

Train Bombed. Foreign advices from Shunehfu, south of Peiping, reported a Japanese plane flew over the city Sunday and dropped a bomb, killing one man. Then, the dispatch said, the plane attacked a passenger train on the Peiping railroad.

The train was said to have been crowded with passengers. Nine persons were reported killed when the plane opened fire with machine guns.

The Japanese were considered determined to wipe out the positions held by the 27th Chinese division at Wanchingsten and
