ON THE evening of September 30 at 8:15 p. m. there was presented, over NBC Red Network radio stations, the 520th Standard Symphony Hour, representing a unique accomplishment in the completion of ten consecutive years of broadcasting fine music. The same day, at 11 o'clock in the morning, saw the beginning of the tenth year of the Standard School Broadcast, one of America's greatest educational programs, now received in more than 3,000 schools on the Pacific Coast and in thousands of homes.

Broadcasting was in its infancy when the Standard Symphony Hour started. Many changes, many improvements, have occurred in the technical and artistic phases of the broadcasts, but this program remains identical to the original ideals and objectives set for it. It is also distinctive and perhaps unique in that it contains no commercial or product advertising. With this we are content. We know that the Standard Symphony Hour has a larger audience than any other Pacific Coast sponsored program and, from the many expressions received, we know how deep is the appreciation of our listeners. In the Standard Symphony Orchestra there is the finest musical talent available, including a number of famed artists. In addition, from time to time, the Standard Symphony Hour presents a number of the leading orchestral organizations of the Pacific Coast, including the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the San Francisco Symphony, the Portland and the Seattle Symphony Orchestras. Among the famous conductors who have appeared are: Hertz, Rodzinski, Dobrowen, Cameron, van Hoogstraten, Molinari, Sir Hamilton Harty, Klemperer, Monteux, Piastro, Blechschmidt, Merola, Lert, Leschke, Nilson, Svedrovsky,
