WAR REFERENDUM PLAN SHELVED BY HOUSE

Editorials on the Day's News

BY FRANK JENKINS HERE is a simple question: What is a producer? Why, a producer is one who makes things—food to eat, clothes to wear, houses to live in, tools to use.

ANOTHER simple question: What is a consumer? A consumer is one who uses the things that are produced—who eats the food, wears the clothes, lives in the houses, handles the tools.

DO PRODUCERS all live on one side of a high fence and consumers all live on the other? Of course not. Producers are also consumers. Consumers are likewise producers.

The farmer produces wheat and the CONSUMER eats it. The worker in a textile mill produces overalls and consumes wheat. The blacksmith produces horseshoes and consumes potatoes.

Producers and consumers are all mixed up together. If you throw a rock at one, you're pretty apt to hit the other.

AND so it is with labor and capital and management. Labor does the work. Capital provides the tools. Management keeps things going and finds a market for the output.

Cripple labor and you hurt capital. Destroy capital and you handicap labor. Hobbles management and you hamstring both labor and capital.

WE ALL DEPEND ON EACH OTHER a lot in this world. FOR years the demagogues (who thrive on discord) have been setting labor and capital and management at each other's throats. The result has been BAD—bad.
