POET'S CORNER

TIME IS DUTY

G. M. Leeper

Why sit idle
And waste
Those priceless hours
That go with haste.

They will not return
To grow your grain,
Those days that fell
In the summer rain.

Those hours spent
In idle waste
Will not bring sweetness
To your taste.

Each passing moment
Holds a thought,
On its journey
Pausing not.

There is not a moment
That we should lose—
When they are gone
We cannot choose.

We see the sunshine
Where it lays,
But pass it by
With idle gaze.

And until winter
Is deep with snow,
'Tis only then
We miss it though.

The breeze that fanned
Our fevered brow
Is gone to distant hills
By now.

Wasted thoughts
And wasted days
Will bring a longing
To our gaze.

Should we sit idle
As the hours go,
Even the tick-tock
Of the clock says no.

For time is a duty,
When it comes it is gone,
And will not return
But simply passes on.
