SUTHERLIN, Feb. 15 — The special Lincoln Sunday services at the Methodist church were well attended. Several poems of the colored people were read by Miss Elizabeth Aebischer. The church choir, E. H. Rothwell, Mrs. Chris Nachman, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wood and Miss Aebischer, gave a pleasing number. The main feature of the program was a part taken from the play "American Gothic" by Helen L. Grows. The scene of the play is on the banks of a river in the south. James Smith took the part of an aged negro; Miss Dorothy Chamberlain was his granddaughter; Carol Riley a neighbor. Assisting with several negro spirituals were Arthur Webber, Joe Chenoweth, Cecil Riley, and Miss Elizabeth Miller, who was also the accompanist on the piano. Miss Miller also directed the other musical numbers. An offering was taken for the board of education for its work among the negroes.

POET'S CORNER

SKEGY

G. M. LEEPER
They chose his name
The cheapest to find,
And called him Skegy Rind.

Poor Skegy always got
They cheapest they had,
For he was only a boy;
Skegy, the lad.

He knew nothing better
So he thought it not bad,
If he starved—oh, well
It was only Skegy, the lad.

Though no one cared
For Skegy the lad—
He had given the world
The best he had.

He had given all
From his nothing, this lad,
But nothing of wealth
For none he had.

No one cared
What he had, or did,
For oh, well, he was only
Skegy, the kid.

But the old street
That Skegy lived on,
Did not look so well
When the lad was gone.

For he had played there
When only a lad
With scraps and nothing
For nothing he had.

But from the street
When Skegy was gone,
There was no shrill whistle
To tell you of dawn.

There was no smile
With freckles to match,
Nor hiked up trousers
That hung to a patch.

For Skegy, poor Skegy,
He always got
The cheapest they had,
For nothing was too poor
For Skegy the lad.

But never-the-less
Heaven will find,
The finest and best
For Skegy, Skegy Rind.

Just massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back at bedtime. Its poultice-vapor action starts bringing relief almost at once. Loosens phlegm, eases coughing, helps break local congestion. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.
