POET'S CORNER

HAUNTED

(The following poem was published in a recent issue of Thought Seeds, Mariposa, Calif.)

The stairs have fallen,
The windows are gone;
Jagged and brambles
Have taken the lawn.
The house that once knew
Sadness and laughter,
Now echoes to creak
Of rotting rafters.

Over the door sill,
So splintered and thin,
Sheep wander at will,
Bleating out and in;
And love, once regnant,
Is left to sorrow
And dream of the past
That knows no morrow.
—Marjorie Hunt Pettit.
