Daily Devotions

By DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Are you able to drink the cup that I drink? This ought to be the question pondered most by everyone who says, "I am a Christian." James and John laid claim to greatness in God's kingdom. Jesus told them it lay here: In drinking His cup and enduring His baptism. There can be no doubt of His meaning. The cup is the same which in the garden He prayed to have removed, that of the suffering and sacrifice of one who determines to redeem and not destroy. The baptism is of blood, accepted and enduring by those who consecrate themselves to such a task. O, Christ, our Redeemer, who hast sacrificed Thyself that we might live, help us now to take the cup and endure the baptism for the sake of our fellow men. Hear us, we pray Thee, for Jesus sake. Amen.

Prune's Nutritious Value Makes It High Economical Asset to Every Food Budget

One wonders why prunes have slipped from an eminent position of near first place in the commissary of every household to a very lowly one of bare existence. Prunes have been the answer to rich spicy butters, to precious fruit breads, and to luscious cereals. They were served stewed, in whips, as Betty's for light desserts, and were wholesome confections for children.

Prunes formerly required long hours of overnight soaking, and additional long hours of slow cooking the following day to break down a tough texture. Improvements in commercial processing have eliminated this, and today a brief half hour of slow cooking in water to cover produces a tender plump product.

Some homemakers may have forgotten the nutritious value of the prune. The moisture has been evaporated, and the fruit becomes a fruit sugar concentrate. It is a good source of vitamin A, some vitamin B, and has been well known for its excellent iron mineral and roughage content. With this supply of food materials, the prune is recognized as a most economical asset to every food budget.

Full Value in All
In giving a place to this product of the northwest, the homemaker commences by investigating the standard sizes and packaging on the market. She learns that she pays additionally for an attractive package, or cellophane bag, and a larger size; but that the smaller size available in bulk contains as much food value, and is as adaptive for numerous uses. After the selection, ingenuity and interest play a major role in creating new uses; why not try?

NATIONAL FORESTS HOLD 126,000 ELK

Wise management increases game in national forests. A recent count by the forest service shows 126,000 elk now in protected national forest areas — enough to allow a short hunting season.

How rapidly elk multiply is shown by the herd in the Helena national forest in Montana. An importation of 32 elk in 1917 has grown into a herd of 500 head. In this isolated region along the continental divide elk summer in the rough highlands and winter on the lower levels where they feed on pasture land and abandoned dry-land wheat fields.

Importing the 32 elk from an overstocked game area cost only $250. Seven were killed before Montana passed a protecting game law in 1918. The herd grew to 250 by 1927.

Twenty-one bull elk were taken by hunters in 1932, when one day of hunting was allowed. By 1936 close to 500 elk were counted and another open hunting day yielded 25 bull elk to sportsmen.

During the past winter state and federal officials received complaints from farmers that the elk were eating crops in the neighborhood of the 900,000-acre national forest. A three-week open season was allowed. Seven hundred hunters registered. Seventy-five elk were killed the first day. Fifty-five more were killed before the season closed.

Forest service officials say the several hundred remaining elk are enough to furnish a big game supply for future hunting seasons.

NEW PENSION PLAN LAUNCHED IN OREGON

SALEM, Ore., April 21 — (AP) — An initiative petition to provide pensions of $10 to $25 a week for qualified voters over 50 years of age was filed with the secretary of state today by Eugene Burr, Portland, and Ellis Bennett, Salem.

Funds for the plan would be raised by warrants which would circulate as money. Stamps, ranging from two cents for $1 warrants to 20 cents for $10 warrants, would be affixed to each warrant. Warrants would be redeemable by the state after 52 weekly stamps are affixed to them.

About $500,000 would be taken from the state treasury to place the plan in operation, $100,000 to be spent in advertising campaigns to acquaint voters with the law's provisions.

An administrator, to be paid $6000 a year and to be elected for a four-year term, would operate the plan.

If 20,020 signatures or registered voters are obtained the measure would appear on the November general election ballot.
