Sugar Production From Apples Seen
As Possibility in Government's Plan
To Establish Research Laboratories

By JOHN L. WHEELER (AP Northwest Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, April 26.—(AP)—Pacific northwest apple growers, concerned now by diminished foreign markets and low domestic prices, may find a prosperous future in the sugar industry.

Startling as it may appear at first glance, agricultural experts assert the plan has a sound basis.

Sugar production from apples may be one of the numerous by-products of the fruit studied if and when the government establishes a research laboratory.

The new farm bill authorizes the establishment of laboratories "each in a major farm producing area" and the Appalachian Apple Growers, Inc., representing some 600 producers of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, has recommended that one be devoted to studies of its product.

"Experienced chemists in the sugar industry have assured us," an official of the Appalachian group said, "that the apple has tremendous possibilities as a source of sugar—that it equals or even surpasses sugar beets commercially."

May Aid Northwest
To Washington and Oregon, with their abundance of apples, and Utah and Idaho, with an equal abundance of sugar beets, any move in the direction proposed by the eastern growers would be of far-reaching importance in the Pacific northwest.

High production costs and low prices have made apples a more or less "troublesome" crop the past few years. There have been great surpluses and for the most part the farmers have ended "in the red."

Even today representatives of Washington's heavy producing district of Wenatchee are in Washington seeking federal aid in financing their next crop. The going has been slow and their problems many because the farmers are not in a position to assume any share of the production cost. If they can raise about a third of the cost from some other federal agency, the farm credit administration has agreed to put up the remaining two-thirds.

Decision Far Off
Agriculture department officials indicated it may be many weeks before a decision is reached on the Appalachian request for an apple laboratory.

They said it would be necessary to map a broad course for research prior to selection of products to be studied in the four laboratories.

The apple growers argue that apples are "a major crop" as evidenced by the annual surpluses. The growers made no suggestions as to a site for the apple laboratory, merely suggesting that such a research unit be set up to study possible apple by-products.

Some of these by-products, they said, were, in addition to sugar, fruit juice and pectin, adding that the latter was "assuming real importance."

Notice
The Sun Printing Co., 111 Oak street, is still owned and operated by Elmer E. Wimberly. The announcement of the sale to W. C. Brooks of Grants Pass was made—but he was taken ill Saturday and his doctor ordered him to take a long rest on account of lead poisoning and a probable nervous breakdown. He being unable to do the work, the former owner took the Sun Printing Co. back and is now sole owner and proprietor—ready to meet and greet all our friends in this land of sunshine and flowers. Signed: ELMER E. WIMBERLY.

Sunshine Club to Meet—The Northside Sunshine club will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Nicholas Andrieff in Riverside.
