POET'S CORNER

SUNSHINE

By Al and Elsie Slaughter As the sun sinks slowly into the deep, As along life's highway we ride, One thinks with a sigh—and a smile— It will only rise on the other side; To bless the hearts of the little lambs That frisk by their mother and play, It's only left this world of ours, To turn their darkness into day.

TO MOTHER

Mother, dearest, as you know, With all the clothes you have to sew, And the stockings and things you have to mend, It seems as if there is no end, Mother, dear, you're so very dear, When you're around I feel no fear, Your hands are very soft indeed, They are always willing to give some need, Your eyes are a beautiful shiny brown, Your hair is a beautiful shiny black, There's nothing, mother, that you lack, For mother, dearest, I love you true, By Lorraine Forrest, Age 11 years, Rose school.

MY MOTHER

My mother is so nice and sweet, She is always clean and neat, Oh she is so kind to me, And kind to her I shall always be, The nicest word on earth is mother, The sweetest word than any other, Her hands are soft and cool, Her eyes are as blue as a pool, Everything she does is true, Nothing wrong will she ever do, Roam the wide world over, And you will find nothing as sweet as your own dear mother, By Lillian Walker.

MOTHER'S DAY

Today you wore a rose of white, While mine was colored red, My mother is alive tonight, But yours is lying dead, I have never known the sorrow Of losing one so dear, So I would like to have you know You may share mine this year, Corinne-Anne Perry.

ALFRED ENGLISH WINS SECOND PRIZE IN NATIONAL CONTEST

Alfred English, 16, senior in the Oakland high school and son of Principal and Mrs. H. F. English, has been announced second place winner in the 1938 scholastic national contest for his humor poem, "Bloodstains on the Sands of Time." The contest was the 14th annual award for creative arts, crafts, music and literature, sponsored by Scholastic, a national high school weekly magazine. Alfred entered his poem in the literary division and received the second prize honor award. There were 10,000 entries in the contest. The poem written by Alfred is as follows: Bloodstains on the Sands of Time (Parody on "Try, Try Again")

Try, try a gun, If at first you don't succeed, Try, try a gun, If you do you'll never need To try, try again, If you wish to go to glory, Don't jump from an upper story— (That would be a bit too gory)— Try, try a gun.

When accounts are in the red, Try, try a gun, After all is done and said, Try, try a gun, Look at each alarming figure, Take a slug and then a jigger, Swallow hard and pull the trigger, Try, try a gun.

If your name is in disgrace, Try, try a gun, Here's one way to leave this place, Try, try a gun, If conditions you deplore, Or if "in-laws" make you sore, Just get out your forty-four, Try, try a gun.

If the way is rough and hard, Try, try a gun, We'll bury you in your back yard, Try, try a gun, When principal plus interest's due, When you find your wife untrue— (She declares she's going to sue)— Try, try a gun.

When they ask us, this we tell 'em, Try, try a gun, Lead poison in your cerebellum; Try, try a gun, If you wish to blow your brains, (Be careful or you'll leave us stains), We'll dispose of your remains, Try, try a gun.

U. S. V. HOSPITAL

By FACILITY EARS Mrs. Irvin Riegel, state hospital chairman, has been busy this week distributing Mother's day cards given patients by the American Legion auxiliary. A gift to be passed on to somebody you love is twice as valuable as a present passively received.

Monday night's picture show, "Wild Money," was a pleasant comedy-melodrama for Edward Everett Horton fans. When we see him on the screen we know we are going to be treated to a demonstration of how the humble and shy worm turns, but we can never anticipate just when the transformation will take place.

Tuesday evening the Spanish-American War Veterans auxiliary played group games with us, and we are sure Bernard McFadden would have heartily approved if he could have looked on at our ageless fun. Everybody had a jolly time, and everybody slept well that night.

Sometimes misanthropes are inclined to question motives for conventional good deeds, but when a neighbor on crutches, afflicted with a fractured leg in a plaster cast, hobbles into the recreation building at one of our parties we know she is interested in our welfare. Mrs. Paul Dusseau "held court" in the auditorium Tuesday evening, and all through the program recipients of her past favors took turns sitting out a number beside her chair.

Gray Ladies serving this week in ward entertainment were Mrs. L. W. Josse, Mrs. George Wharton, Mrs. Edward Hines, Mrs. George McEhee, Mrs. A. H. Mountford and Mrs. E. F. Tandy.

Thursday afternoon the convalescent patients and the employees were treated to a special sound picture featuring safe driving. It exploited good sense. We hope all our folks will adopt the suggestions offered.

The regular Thursday show was "Hot Water," which revealed a new chapter in the Jones family series, municipal politics. Spring Brighton plays the part of the wife and mother so well it makes us homesick, and George Ernest, in the role of the younger son, is a boy any man would be proud to own.

Eighty per cent of our patient census attended that movie, and next morning much of the conversation was on the subject of what fathers of children should do, and what they should refrain from doing.

Friday evening we were the beneficiaries of the neighbors of Woodcraft, who gave us some amateur theatricals. It is evident that Hollywood scouts have not yet discovered all the talent in the county.

Tonight the planets Venus and Mars will appear so close together that without the aid of glasses they look to be one star. Would that the god of love and the god of war could thus merge their kingdoms!
