IMPORTANCE AND HISTORY OF POPPY PROGRAM

The poppy, that little red flower from "among the crosses row on row," which Americans wear each year to honor the World War dead, has become an important factor in alleviating the sufferings resulting from the war, according to Mrs. V. J. Miceli, poppy chairman of Unipqua unit of the American Legion auxiliary, who is directing arrangements for observance of Poppy day here May 20-21.

From the poppy each year the American Legion auxiliary raises approximately $1,000,000 for the relief and rehabilitation of disabled veterans, and for the care of fatherless children of veterans, Mrs. Miceli explained. This money forms the principal support of the vast rehabilitation and child welfare program carried out constantly by the auxiliary in cooperation with the American Legion.

Women in almost every city and town in the United States take part in the memorial poppy program. The auxiliary, with its 425,000 members and 9,000 local units, sponsors the work, aided by women and girls from other groups. Last year nearly 10,000,000 of the little flowers were distributed and this year the number is expected to increase to 12,000,000.

Benefits to the disabled veterans began long in advance of the distribution of the poppies on Poppy day. Many hundreds receive employment in making the millions of little crepe paper flowers. Manufacture is started early in the winter and continues through the spring. This year poppies were made for the auxiliary in 65 veterans' hospitals and poppy workshops located in 40 different states.

Making of the poppies is directed by the state organizations of the auxiliary and coordinated through the national organization. One cent apiece is the price paid the disabled men for making the flowers. The number each man is permitted to make in one day is limited to prevent overtaxing of strength and to spread the work among as many men as possible. The work is a Godsend to the veterans employed, who receive little or no government compensation, meaning an opportunity to help support their families or to save a little money for the day when they leave the hospital and begin the difficult struggle to make a fresh start in life.

The mental diversion of making the poppies has been found an excellent way to steady the nerves and occupy the minds of hospital patients. The comforting thought often for the first time in years, is of tremendous value to many of these men. Pride of workmanship is taken, with the knowledge that the flowers are to be worn in honor of comrades who died in France.

The idea of the poppy as the memorial flower for the World War dead sprang from Colonel John McCrea's poem, "Flanders Fields," written at the battlefront shortly before his death. It was first brought forward in the United States by Miss Moira Michael of Athens, Georgia, who was serving on the staff of the U. S. M. C. A. headquarters in New York City. On November 9, 1918, after reading Colonel McCrea's poem, Miss Michael bought and distributed silk poppies to the men attending a Y. M. C. A. conference.

After the armistice the poppy idea spread rapidly. Poppies were distributed on the streets of Millwaukee during the homecoming of the 32nd division in June, 1918, and again on Memorial Day of 1920. In August, 1920, the Georgia department of the American Legion adopted the poppy as a memorial flower, and the national convention of the Legion in Cleveland the following month made the poppy the Legion's national memorial flower. The American Legion auxiliary officially adopted the poppy as its memorial flower at the first national convention in Kansas City in 1921. The poppy is also the memorial flower of the British Legion.

The amount of $1,248 has been paid to veterans at the Roseburg veterans administration facility making the poppies this year. About one hundred men made the poppies. One cent per poppy is paid to the men making them and the remainder goes to child welfare and hospital work.

BRIDE'S COIFFURE

The June bride picks a coiffure which will be as becoming with her going-away hat as with her bridal veil and wreath. This one—a soft version of the popular upsway type—is brushed upward all the way around, with loose curls on top. Notice that the curls are dressed low enough on the back of the head to fill in the space between hat and neckline. As a final touch, she sprays a bit of special hair perfume over the finished coiffure. (From Parfums Well, New York)
