POET'S CORNER

FOR THE LACK OF A SMILE

By G. M. LEEPER It seems so strange What makes or mars the day, And brings the heart's desire Or takes them all away.

All for the lack of a smile; Ah, how much do they cost! But for the lack of one The day was all but lost.

Would you lose a day Just for the lack of a smile? And let someone walk away For oh—so long awhile.

Just for the lack of a smile That cost you not a penny, You trod for many hours That seemed so long and many.

Just for the lack of a smile, Just for the wish of it now, It wouldn't have been an effort With someone to show you how.

Oh no a smile isn't much But you'll miss it when it's gone, And a face soon grows old That has no smile on.

For the lack of a smile And the wish of it now, 'Tis the lack of one That wrinkles the brow.

For the lack of a smile There was nothing to say, And someone lost One beautiful day.

For the lack of a smile And the pleasure of smiling, A gray mound was heaped And flowers lay piling.

Smile through the years And smile through your tears, Smile now and then Every once in a while; And don't lose the day, For the lack of a smile.
