NOTED CORPORATION ATTORNEY PASSES

NEW YORK, June 16.—(AP)—Thomas L. Chadbourne, 66, whose skill at corporation law helped him amass a fortune estimated at $15,000,000, died in a hospital last night shortly after suffering a heart attack on his yacht. Chadbourne, one of the nation's foremost corporation attorneys, was board chairman of the International Mining corporation and a director in about 20 other corporations, including the Otis Elevator company, Mack Trucks, Inc., and the Curtiss Wright corporation. He attained international prominence as author of the Chadbourne world sugar control plan adopted in 1931 by the international sugar conference at Brussels. The later failure of the plan he blamed upon stepped-up production of sugar by the United States and other large consumer countries. Known as a "radical capitalist," Chadbourne was a pioneer in advocating labor's right to bargain collectively and to share in corporate profits. For many years he was president of the American Association for Labor Legislation. Born in Houghton, Mich., he studied at the University of Michigan but never was graduated from any college. His third wife and two daughters survive.
